11-Inch Snow Snags Traffic Of City; Many In Accidents

Temperature of 14 Is Predicted Today

Winter Takes 70 Lives; 51 Below Recorded in Minnesota.

The heaviest snow of the winter partially paralyzed Washington and its suburbs yesterday, swirled from gray clouds throughout the day, piled drifts over a foot high in streets and put thousands of jobless men to work with shovels.

Washington was covered with a blanket of 11 inches of snow at 8 o'clock last night. The fall, which began before dawn yesterday, slackened around 6 p. m., and then resumed with renewed vigor.

While Washington shivered and mushed, the intense cold, accompanied by floods and storms, beset the entire Nation as winter launched its most bitter assault of the year.

All-American Winter.

Minnesota temperatures were as low as 40 and 50 degrees below zero. Winter stretched its frozen fingers across the continent from the Arctic Circle to the Gulf of Mexico. Damage was running into hundreds of thousands of dollars, the Associated Press reported. New names were added to the roster of more than 70 fatalities.

As the Capital blew on its hands and began the actual work of digging out of the drifts last night, the Weather Bureau predicted fair and colder weather for today, with the mercury dropping to a minimum of 14 today at about 7:30 a. m. Tomorrow also will be fair and cold, with a bright sun, weather officials said.

As the snowfall slackened late yesterday afternoon, a minimum temperature of 24 was reached. Yesterday's high, 27, was reached at 7:30 a. m., just before District residents rolled out of bed and prepared for the struggle of getting to their offices.

44 Snow Plows Busy.

The District put 44 snow plows into operation throughout yesterday, with 11 graders assisting them. Throughout the snowfall 500 District workers were busy cleaning the streets.

Between 5,000 and 6,000 emergency relief workers were employed last night. Over 2,500 of these were assigned to regular streets, avenues and boulevards cleaning the sidewalks and main thoroughfares, and

$129,000 Loot In Mail Holdup

Five Bandits Escape After Robbing Postal Truck in New England.

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 23 (AP).—In the largest postal robbery in the history of New England, five bandits today held up a United States mail truck and tonight had apparently made good their escape with $129,000 in currency.

The bandits were armed with machine guns and pistols.

Apparently in conformance with a carefullly prepared plan, a sedan was driven ahead of the small truck, forcing it to a halt. Two of the sedan's four occupants jumped out and leaped aboard the truck. At pistol point, Herbert B. Reid, 43, for 20 years a postal employe, who was transferring registered mail from the railroad station to the postoffice, was forced into the sedan, bound and blindfolded.

Convoyed by Sedan.

The truck then was convoyed by the sedan out of the city to South Somerset, about 2½ miles away, where a fifth member of the gang waited in another car. Reid was forced to surrender the key to the rear door of the mail truck, the loot was quickly transferred to the wait-

20 Below Zero! Dionne Babies Revel in Icy Nap

Not the Dionne quintuplets. They were bundled up as usual and put out on the veranda for their daily outdoor nap.

"They like it," Dr. A. R. Dafoe explained. "In fact, they raise ructions when denied their outing."

The five girls, now seven months and 26 days old, are all in fine fettle, Dr. Dafoe said. Taken all together, they weighed 65 pounds 11¾ ounces today.

Bentley Order Frees 2 Boys For New Trial

Judge Backs Commitment; Hearing on 'Joyriding' Set for Jan. 30.

Freed from the National Training School for Boys when Judge Fay L. Bentley of Juvenile Court ruled yesterday that they were entitled to a new trial, Arthur Penn and William Fanning, 15-year-old school boys, immediately began preparations for meeting the charge of joyriding at a formal hearing January 30.

The boys are accused of taking the automobile of a neighbor. They drove the machine to Roanoke, Va., where they abandoned it. They were arrested by a Virginia policeman, who discovered them asleep in another automobile and who promptly charged them with attempting to take the second car.

Brought before Judge Bentley last Friday, the boys admitted they had taken an automobile from this city and had driven it to Roanoke. They were sentenced to the Training School until they were 21.

Opens Way to New Trial.

In a prepared statement which she read in court, Judge Bentley said that, "the Government making no objection to counsel's motion for a new trial, the court has decided to grant the motion to afford opportunity for a new trial.

"It is the purpose of the Juvenile Court to protect children. At the trial these boys were arraigned in

'Dale,' New Destroyer Christened at Brooklyn

Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 23 (AP).—As 3,000 spectators cheered, the new destroyer Dale slipped down her ways at the Brooklyn Navy Yard and into the East River today. She is the fourth ship of the United States Navy to bear the name of Dale in memory of Commodore Richard C. Dale, naval hero of Revolutionary War days.

Japanese Reported Beaten Back From China in Fierce Battle

Initial Nippon Drive in Chehar Province Held Failure; Tokyo Rushes Reinforcements; Lengthy Campaign Predicted.

Peiping, China (Thursday), Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Heavy fighting was under way today in eastern Chahar Province, where Chinese troops desperately sought to throw back a new Japanese advance into north-central Asia.

Dispatches from the front at Tushihkou, a pass in the Great Wall on the Chahar-Jehol border northwest of Peiping, said the Chinese army had repelled the initial Japanese drive.

The Japanese war machine, consolidating its position in Jehol province and the rest of Manchuria, rolled into the pass in a long-expected campaign which the Chinese fear is designed to add Chahar province to Manchukuo.

Vital to Japan's Set-up.

The move is strategically vital in Japan's set-up of a buffer state against Soviet Russia in Asia, for it would give her control of the trade route linking China with points on the Russian Trans-Siberian railroad.

A Chinese spokesman said the Japanese force included 1,000 picked men aided by 1,000 Manchukuo soldiers.

The battle raged along a 25-mile front from Tushihkou to Kuyuan. A strict censorship was established.

The Japanese military attache in Peiping, Col. Takahashi, confirmed the report that fighting had broken out at Tushihkou, Kuyuan and Tungchiassu. He predicted a lengthy campaign—indicating that Tokyo is

High School Boy Held As Extortion Suspect

Shreveport, La., Jan. 23 (AP).—Federal agents and city police today reported they had arrested a youth they booked as Paul Truett Price, 16-year-old high school student, after he had received a decoy package in an attempted extortion case.

The officers said the youth confessed that he sent three extortion notes to Andrew Querbes, president of the First National Bank here, demanding $2,000 under a threat to kidnap the banker's grandson, Andrew Querbes 3d, 6 years old.

Mass Slaying Valentine Day Held 'Solved'

Chicago Reports Suspect Confessed, Implicating 5 Others in Gang.

Chicago, Jan. 23 (AP).—Reports were published here today that the underworld's most gory crime—the 1929 Valentine Day massacre of seven gangsters—had been solved by the statement of Byron Bolton, held as a member of the notorious Karpis-Barker mob.

The Chicago American in a copyrighted story said Bolton had named all participants in the crime and that his written statement was now in the hands of J. Edgar Hoover, head of the division of investigation of the Department of Justice at Washington.

Dissemination of the story brought immediate and conflicting statements. Said Hoover: "There's not a word of truth in it." Said Police Capt. John Stege, underworld authority of the Chicago force: "It sounds probable." Said D. M. Ladd, agent in charge at the Chicago Division of Investigation: "Federal agents have not questioned Bolton about the massacre."

Massacre Suspects Named.

Named as "trigger men" and plotters in the massacre by Bolton, the American said, were: Murray Humphreys, one time No. 1 man of the Capone mob, now serving a term in Leavenworth for income tax evasion; Claude Maddox, hoodlum still at large; Fred ("Killer") Burke, serving time in Michigan for murder; Gus Winkler, slain underworld go-between; Fred ("The Brains") Goetz, University man turned gangster, and Bolton.

Slain in efforts to exterminate the George ("Bugs") Moran gang on Valentine Day were Peter Gusenberg, former convict; Frank, his brother; Adam Heyer, alias Arthur

Huey Starts Own 'Little D. C.'; Plans 'Pennsylvania Avenue'

Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 23 (AP). Square deal leadership, which is sworn to combat the Huey Long dictatorship, held its peace today while Long formally assumed control of East Baton Rouge Parish and made his plans to build a miniature Washington, D. C., out of the capital city of Louisiana.

Disregarding protest and defiance of the 13 elected police jurors of East Baton Rouge Parish, Long had his Governor, O. K. Allen, commission an equal number of jurors under one of his dictatorial laws and set up the State capital's city council to administer parish affairs.

He then had the Governor commission Eugene Cazedessus, Baton Rouge banker, as State coordinator to sit as a member of the city commission council to replace Lowers Higginbotham, commissioner of streets and parks, whose job Long abolished with a legislative act.

He said he was going to widen Church street and make it a "Pennsylvania avenue" of his "Little District of Columbia," move the Catholic Brothers School to the old campus of Louisiana State University to make room and cut the street straight through to the Statehouse.

He estimated that a tract owned by Louisiana State University could be improved and sold at a profit of hundreds of thousands of dollars to finance his Pennsylvania avenue project.

Ickes Denied Full Powers Over Works

Buchanan Defends Bill as Vital to Abolition of 'Dole.'

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Committee amendments crippling the $4,880,000,000 works bill were reported to the House yesterday as leaders prepared to jam the measure through to final passage today.

Major developments in the day's tug-of-war between regular Democrats and an embattled coalition of insurgent New Dealists and Republicans included:

1. Speaker Byrns passed along word that Secretary Ickes—persona non grata to many members—would not have the final say-so in disbursement of the fund.

2. A storm of criticism greeted news that the Administration intended to pay wages averaging $50 a month on the works jobs.

3. Debate began under a liberalized gag rule.

4. President Roosevelt's authority in administering the lump sum was curtailed to some extent.

The opposition will make a last-minute attempt today to limit further the President's power and to outlaw Federal competition with private business.

House Meets Earlier.

So many members felt the forensic urge it was decided the House should meet today at 11 a. m., an hour earlier than usual, so dozens of amendments could be disposed of in time for a vote on final passage before nightfall. A five-minute rule was clamped on consideration of all amendments.

Chairman Buchanan of the appropriations committee defended the bill as vital to recovery. Ordinarily calm and deliberate, he was harassed by so many questions that he paced up and down the well of the floor and gesticulated almost constantly.

He promised no more works money would be asked in the next session. Expenditures of an emergency character in 1934 and 1935, he reported, will total $9,543,000,000, while the outlay for the two fiscal years included in the measure, 1936 and 1937, would be smaller by $4,961,000,000.

"We're determined to stop the dole in this country," he added. "Local committees are putting hundreds and thousands of people on the relief rolls who have no business there. If let that go on your relief bill will consume every dollar in the Federal Treasury. Cash relief must be stopped."

Representative Bulwinkle (Democrat), North Carolina, one of the insurgents, contended passage of the resolution in its present form would challenge the integrity of the House.

"When by one swoop we wipe out and delegate all authority that we have," he deplored, "we might as well close shop and come back here in 1937."

Penalty Opposed.

The Southerner bitterly opposed the bill's broad penalty clause.

"I say frankly," he protested, "that I can not conceive of any criminal acts which might be committed on account of the provisions of this bill that are not already on the statute books. This is a matter of delegating the right to a board or to a single person to provide penal statutes, to make criminals, without the Congress passing on what the law is."

Bulwinkle objected that Congress should not "sit supinely by" and permit abolition or merger of departments without specific authority, as proposed in the measure.

Chairman Connery, House Labor Committee, outstanding among the Democratic rebels, warned he would submit two amendments. One would prevent payment of less than the prevailing wages on the works projects and the other would proscribe any agency from promulgating rules changing existing law. He pointed out such a change would retain an existing limitation of 30 hours a week on Federal works jobs.

"I don't think $50 a month comes anywhere near being a living wage for anyone, let alone a skilled mechanic," he declared.

Connery had reference to testimony of Admiral C. J. Peoples, Treasury procurement chieftain, before the Appropriations Committee, which came to light earlier in the day.

Committee Approves Flandin Finance Plan

Paris, Jan. 23 (U.P.).—The Chamber of Deputies' finance commission tonight, 11 to 5, approved the government's bill increasing the limit on issuance of short-term government bonds to 15,000,000,000 (B) francs ($990,000,000). It had been 10,000,000,000 francs.

Finance Minister Louis Germain-Martin assured the members the bill would not lead to inflation. It will be debated in the chamber Friday.

Speed Urged On President In NRA Plan

Guild Secretary Would Resign Due to Ruling in Jennings Case.

By Felix Bruner.

Speed in outlining a program for the future of NRA is being urged upon President Roosevelt by NRA officials to prevent misunderstanding and an "upset condition" in the Recovery Administration. At NRA yesterday a high official declared that not only the organization, but industry and labor were marking time to "see what will happen." The situation was declared to be in a condition of stalemate until the President speaks.

While NRA officials and others who attended the White House conference Tuesday night maintained a strict silence at the request of the President, it is known that they urged him to speed his program to prevent the organization from approaching a state of disintegration. The President himself said that various suggestions were discussed at the meeting, but that no conclusions were reached and that other conferences would follow.

Meanwhile, NRA was faced with increasingly difficult problems. Foremost is the automobile code, which expires February 3. The National Industrial Recovery Board at its meeting today will discuss the question of whether the code should be renewed in its present form or revised. It was asserted several days ago that the code would be extended without changes. In spite of this announcement, there is known to be sharp division in the board on the subject of labor provisions in the code. In connection with its study of this code the board will have before it a report of the Research and Planning Council on the automobile industry, which is expected to be made public within a few days.

30-hour Week Asked.

Labor unions are asking that the code provide for a 30-hour week instead of the average maximum of 35 hours as at present provided This would apply except during the ten-week peak production period, during which they are asking a 36-hour week with the provision that in slack periods the work week be reduced to 24 hours before the men are laid off. Before the actual expiration of the code, the NRA will hear a discussion of code labor provisions, beginning January 30. The grievances of the automobile workers are expected to be aired in this meeting.

At the same time, NRA was described by W. A. Harriman, its executive officer, as being "definitely on the spot" in reference to the dispute over discharge from the San Francisco Call-Bulletin of Dean S. Jennings. His statement followed a letter from President Roosevelt to the National Labor Relations Board, declaring that the board, which had already ordered reinstatement of Jennings, had no jurisdiction in the case. This threw the case back upon NRA officials.

President Roosevelt said that his letter had been based on the "somewhat novel" theory that parties to a written agreement should live up to that agreement.

Eddy Would Resign.

In New York, according to the Associated Press, the American Newspaper Guild, employes' organization, announced that Jonathan Eddy, its executive secretary, had asked permission of the guild's na-

Wood Specialist Traces Ladder To Hauptmann

ARTHUR J. KOEHLER, who traced the Lindbergh ransom ladder to Hauptmann's home.

Guilty Tools Came Out of German's Chest, Says Koehler.

State Rests Today; Bruno to Testify

Defense Will Seek to Assail Testimony of Technologist.

(Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.)

Hunterdon County Courthouse, Flemington, N. J., Jan. 23.—The tools that carved and hacked out the rude ladder that the kidnaper left outside the home of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh belong in Bruno Richard Hauptmann's carpenter chest, a witness testified today.

A piece of the lumber in the ladder, added Arthur Koehler, Department of Agriculture wood expert, came out of the flooring in the Hauptmann attic.

Those were the charges flung at the prisoner today as the early dusk of winter was smudging the windows with gray. Hauptmann blinked his eyes rapidly, like a man who is impatient.

State Rests Today.

Tomorrow the State will rest its case, and the hour will strike when the prisoner can go to the witness chair and pour his story into the ears of the world.

The prosecution saved its best until last, and tonight everybody knows what Attorney General David T. Wilentz was talking about when he shouted in his opening statement:

"Mr. Bruno Richard Hauptmann has this kidnaper's ladder right around his neck."

A Detective Story.

Koehler never was a member of a police force and never earned his living by running criminals into the ground. But today he told an enthralling detective story of how he took grains of sawdust, rings and knots and chisel nicks in time-stained boards and came to the conclusion that Hauptmann built the kidnaper's ladder with his own tools and used a piece of wood from his own attic to do it.

For two hours this afternoon time stood still and the years rolled back. Spectators were filled with a strange sense that they were not in a wet, steaming courtroom in Flemington, N. J., but back in old London, two flights up in a house on Baker street, where Mr. Sherlock Holmes was telling them how he did it.

This was not twentieth century police work that Koehler was giving them; it was the kind of stuff out of which Sir Arthur Conan Doyle spun his tales.

Clews Dim and Cold.

Koehler was called into the case after all clews were dim and cold. They handed him a ladder that was found outside the Lindbergh home after the kidnaping, and he went over it with a microscope.

He noticed, with his microscope, that the lumber in the ladder was unevenly planed; that is, that one of the eight knives on the circular planer that prepared the timber was duller than the other seven. There was nothing that the human eye could detect—just a tiny variation that only an expert could see.

Koehler began a weary tour of lumber mills, looking for one that had a planer with one dull knife in it. The first 100 mills offered no clew; the first 300 also were barren. His weary tour went on. Five hundred mills were investigated and still Koehler was in the dark.

It looked hopeless, but he plugged on. People were forgetting the Lindbergh case and interested in the world series and what kind of a back field Minnesota was going to have. Finally he had investigated 1,000 mills in all sections of the

Roosevelt Set To Unfold Aim For Resources

Message Telling Plan for Future Due This Week; Others Listed.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

As the first of a new series of special messages, President Roosevelt plans to send up to Capitol Hill today or tomorrow a communication transmitting the report of the National Resources Board.

This he will follow up next week with another message accompanying the report of the Federal Aviation Commission, which recommends the construction of a huge airship for trans-ocean travel, among other things.

Also in sight, but not yet definite enough to be put down on paper, are messages dealing with extension and reorganization of the NRA, and the institution of a Federal curb on public utility holding companies.

The resources board report pictures the planned development of the Nation, along the Rooseveltian ideas. By focusing attention on it with a special message, Mr. Roosevelt intends to give Congress a preview of the program he has in mind for years to come.

Is Undecided on Aviation.

A final draft of the aviation commission report was handed the President yesterday by Clark Howell, sr., chairman. Mr. Roosevelt said he is undecided whether to recommend legislation at this time, or to await other reports on the unification of transportation.

In his address opening Congress, the President said he would ask for legislation later in the session bringing all forms of transportation under Federal regulation. Presumably this involves the Interstate Commerce Commission, which would be expanded to meet the new demands.

Anticipating this action, the report on aviation recommends the creation of a temporary five-man board to have charge of civil aviation until such time as its duties may be absorbed by the new I. C. C.

It also urges the construction of a large dirigible, patterned after the German Zeppelin now being built, which would be leased by the Gov-

President Favors Civil Service In New Deal at 'Proper Time'

President Roosevelt favors bringing all employes of the alphabetical agencies under Civil Service regulations "at the proper time," members of the Civil Service Commission disclosed after a visit to the White House yesterday.

Harry B. Mitchell, president of the commission, and Leonard D. White, who accompanied him, said their discussion with the President concerned methods and details of accomplishing this.

While declining to go into particulars, Mr. Mitchell said "the proper time" for extending the civil service to different groups of New Deal employes may vary. The number of such employes now outside the Civil Service has been estimated as high as 100,000.

Garner Seeks $15,810 On Two Lots in Texas

Oklahoma City, Jan. 23 (AP).—Mrs. Annie S. Cobb, Oklahoma City, was served today with notice of a mortgage foreclosure suit filed against her and several other defendants in Uvalde, Tex., by John Nance Garner, Vice President of the United States.

Chain Store Sales Tax Held Void in Vermont

Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 23 (AP).—Vermont's sales tax on chain stores was declared illegal today in a decision rendered by Chancellor Sturtevant in the case of the Great Atlantic and Pacific and the First National Stores against Erwin M. Harvey, commissioner of taxes.

The chancellor's verdict perpetually enjoins the State from enforcing or attempting to enforce the provisions of the act adopted in 1933. The tax was a graduated one on gross sales. The plaintiffs contended it was unconstitutional because it was "discriminatory and confiscatory."

Roper Will Ask 5-Year Census Of Population

Will Forward Request to President; Count Would Start in April.

By Felix Bruner.

Secretary Roper announced yesterday that he would recommend to President Roosevelt that Congress be asked to authorize a new population census in April.

The Secretary's statement followed recommendations of the Business Advisory and Planning Council that a census be taken every five years. Roper said he believed that a census should be taken in an "off year" if an emergency made it necessary, but that he disagreed with the council that a five-year census should be substituted permanently for a ten-year census.

Roper said the present emergency made it necessary to conduct a census to determine the amount of unemployment, and to determine the extent of shifts in population and why these shifts are occurring.

Would Probe Background.

He suggested that the proposed census should go much further than any previous enumeration in establishing the background of the country's population, and that it should assist in classifying groups of people according to the type of employment for which they are fitted.

Roper pointed out that there never have been any accurate statistics on unemployment and on part-time employment, and that these figures are necessary in defining a recovery program. He said the census might serve as a basis for a voluntary reshifting of the population from industrial centers to the land.

The Secretary indicated that the census might be paid for from the proposed $4,800,000,000 appropriation for work relief. He estimated that it would cost about $13,250,000. The 1930 census cost the Government $14,200,000.

Roper also stressed the need for establishing credit facilities for small industries. He said he believed the banks should be responsible for extending industrial credit.

The business advisory and planning council already has appointed a sub-committee to study the question of loans to small industries, and this committee is expected to report soon.

Council Put "On Map."

The census recommendation came as another evidence of the growing importance of the advisory council, which is composed of 52 of the country's leading business executives. The council has been in existence since early in the present Administration, but it has come into prominence only in the last few days. It was "put on the map" by the recent announcement that President Roosevelt wished it to obtain the views of business on pending legislation and other problems. Since that announcement, there has been an increasing effort to push the council to the front and more is expected to be heard from it in the future.

The new attitude toward the council is taken as an indication that the Administration is beginning to "play up" to business and that criticism from industrial organizations that they have not been able to get the ear of the President will be met by giving the council, which represents a cross section of big business, more and more prominence. The Commerce Department has been heard from less frequently than almost any department in connection with the recovery program. It is expected that in the future it will play a much more important part, even, possibly, to the point of taking over some of the functions now being performed by NRA.

Stagger Hour Plan Tried at FHA Unit

Old Southern Building Staff on From 8:30 to 4.

Federal Housing Administration employes in the old Southern Building, Thirteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, yesterday went on an 8:30 to 4 schedule when officials there decided to make an actual test of the suggestion to "stagger" hours following a request from the White House for recommendations on this plan.

It is understood the White House has called on establishments located in the area between Twelfth and D, Fourteenth streets, and Constitution and Pennsylvania avenues for their views.

It was said yesterday Federal Housing Authorities believed an actual test would be the only way to determine the feasibility of the plan.

Between You and Me

Ickes, the Hot Water Boy; Roosevelt Sticks His Chin Out; Unfrankable Telegrams.

By Raymond Clapper

Secretary of Interior Ickes now has the unquestioned distinction of being the No. 1 hot-water boy of the Administration.

His latest quarrel is with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. It is over the U. S. Forest Service which Ickes is trying to take away from the Department of Agriculture and tuck under his own wing in the Interior Department. Ickes made a speech in New York night before last in which he bluntly declared that all conservation activities should be gathered into the Interior Department. He said that President Roosevelt was being obstructed in his conservation policies by "little cliques of one-track-mind conservationists."

Within 24 hours F. A. Silcox, chief of the Agriculture Department's Forest Service, spoke from the same platform, taking direct issue with Ickes and opposing his effort to absorb the Forest Service.

The story here is that recently a proposition was made to Silcox to become Assistant Secretary of Interior, a suggestion intended apparently to kill off his opposition to the transfer of the Forest Service. Silcox refused to consider the idea and is continuing with his battle to keep his bureau under Wallace.

This open break comes on the eve of the convention here next week of the American Society of Foresters, which already is split wide open over the Ickes-Wallace dispute.

However, this is only one sector in the Ickes battle line. At the same time the forestry row broke, his department was issuing a press release reprinting a magazine article which criticized Postmaster General Farley and Attorney General Cummings. Another development was the news th Congress has received sub-rosa word that Ickes would not have charge of distributing the $4,800,000,000 work relief fund. This word was circulated to pacify Representatives who had become offended with the way Ickes administered PWA money. P has been under fire for using PWA funds as a club to force Robert Moses, recent Republican candidate for Governor of New York, to resign as Triborough Bridge commissioner.

Only recently it was reported in face of diplomatic denials that the White House had become irked at activities of two of his assistants with suggestions that the telephone lines of Cabinet officers had been tapped.

President Roosevelt doesn't very ofte[illegible] his chin out [illegible] he did [illegible]. He said that the Norris World Court reservation, proposing that a two-thirds Senate vote be required on any court proposition affecting the United S[illegible] was an encroachm Executive authority.

And that after the countless delegations of power which Mr. Roosevelt has taken from Congress, one of which the Supreme Court recently declared constitutional, and in face of the pending $4,800,000,000 blank check which he is asking for work relief.

Few Presidents would give the Senate such an opening. But perhaps Mr. Roosevelt figured that Congress has been pulling its punches so long that he wasn't taking much of a chance.

The best guess still is that Harry Hopkins will head the pending work relief program. The White House is keeping still on that subject until after Congress passes the appropriation, but it is noted that whenever the works program is up at the White House Hopkins usually sits in.

An admiral bearing the felicitous name of Christian Joy Peoples has spent the last few months working on the new program. He was the Administration's chief witness in defending the $4,800,000,000 proposal before the House Appropriations Committee.

While not likely to be the top man in the works program, he is expected to have an important hand in it. About a year ago Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau borrowed Admiral Peoples from the Navy to handle the Government's public building program, which was becoming more confused every day. Previously he was paymaster general of the Navy and chief of the bureau of supplies and accounts. He has had 20 years' experience dealing in Government contracts and he knows most of the tricks on both sides of the bargaining table.

You can believe it or not, but Mr. Roosevelt said at his press conference yesterday that he had not read the work relief bill.

"You ought to read it, Mr. President," one reporter suggested. Whether the President has any suspicion of its contents was not indicated.

Gov. David Sholtz of Florida is a Brooklyn boy who went South a few years ago and made good. He first appeared on the national stage at the Lafayette ceremonies in the House of Representatives last winter. The Senate was ushered in with great ceremony. Likewise the Diplomatic Corps and the Supreme Court. Finally Joe Sinnott, chief doorkeeper, strode in and thundered, "The Governors of the several States."

In walked one solitary Governor, Sholtz.

He has just been here discussing arrangements for the fishing trip which Mr. Roosevelt expects to make in Florida waters late in March. A good press agent for his State, Sholtz reports 150,000 new residents in the last year. He is causing Gov. Talmadge of Georgia plenty of trouble by turning back indigent transients at the State line. He estimates 25,000 have been shut out, and advised to go to California, where the climate is almost as good.

Senator Nye's munitions investigation has been a long time edging around to the Roosevelt Administration, but its naval building program is now coming under the microscope. In spite of the provision in the Vinson act limiting profits, Senator Nye is on the hunt for what he believes to be collusion. If there was evasion of the profit limitation, the evidence may have considerable bearing on the Administration's effort to take the profit out of war. It may prove to be easier said than done.

Members of Congress have been put on notice against making free use of Government frank to send free telegrams. Chairman Lindsay C. Warren, of the Committee on Accounts, has sent a letter to all members warning them not to try to charge up to the Government any telegrams in the nature of news, congratulations, condolences, or of a political or personal nature, nor telegrams giving the result of legislation in committee or on the floor or in answer to propaganda soliciting the view of members. Telegrams notifying candidates for office of their appointment are not to be charged to the Government. No long-distance telephone calls can be charged up.

These restrictions were the result of long-standing abuses which went unchallenged for years. Some members made it a practice to draw up statements for the press and wire them at Government expense to all newspapers in their districts, to congratulate constituents on the births of children, and to rush to the wires to break the news of appointments to political lieutenants.

Furthermore, Congress passed a law at the last session providing that the cost of unfrankable telegrams should be deducted from a member's salary. Members were warned by Representative Warren that this would entail full publicity.

Recently it was reported in this place that Chairman Morgan of TVA spent $16.90 on electricity for his house at Norris, Tenn., including electric heating. That looked like a bargain, but it caused consternation at TVA headquarters. They said the correct figure was $10.90. So it was. Bad arithmetic.

Recommendations have just been made to the House and Senate Judiciary Committees by Attorney General Cummings, which he thinks will make it easier to convict criminals once the law has laid its hands on them.

He proposes repealing the prohibition against the court or prosecuting attorney making reference to failure of a defendant to testify in his own behalf.

Defendants would be prohibited from springing alibi witnesses without warning during a trial and would be required to give reasonable notice before trial so that the prosecution may check up on such witnesses.

Another bill would provide machinery for taking depositions of witnesses by the prosecution before trial to thwart the difficulties often caused by disappearance of key witnesses.

How is a criminal lawyer going to build up a reputation if they do things like that to the profession?

tional executive committee to resign from the newspaper industrial board.

"President Roosevelt's action of yesterday in denying the guild the right of appeal," Eddy said, "makes my continued presence on the board tantamount to condoning a fraud upon the working newspaper people of the country."

Another question upon which the NIRB is hopelessly deadlocked is that of the cigarette code. Conflicting recommendations concerning this code are expected to go to the White House this week, probably putting President Roosevelt in the position of imposing his own code upon the industry.

Shoe Workers Aroused.

A sympton of the labor difficulties with which the NRA is troubled came yesterday with the threat of boot and shoe workers to walk out on a hearing involving the Massachusetts boot and shoe industry. After appearing for the hearing, labor representatives discovered that the members of the code authority were not present.

Israel Zimmerman, editor of the United Shoe and Leather Worker, characterized failure of the code authority members to appear as "evidence of incompetence" and a "flagrant flaunting of the interests of 250,000 shoe workers."

A formal request that members of the code authority be summoned resulted in a huddle of NRA authorities, who announced that they had no authority to force the appearance of anyone.

Later J. O. Ball, vice chairman of the code authority, appeared at the hearing and explained that he understood that the hearing would last for several days and quoted a letter he had sent to representatives of the industry asking them to appear on January 29.

A statement from the workers declared the code authority members "so woefully failed in their stewardship as administrators of this code that they did not dare to report on this stewardship publicly."

Trouble came from still another source when it was announced that lumber manufacturers in the Southeast had declared it was impossible for them to continue under the code. Harriman, in a letter, replied that if the lumber men withdrew the Government would take steps to enforce the code.

At the same time, Sol A. Rosenblatt, compliance and enforcement director of NRA, declared violation of the code will be prosecuted.

The Supreme Court has indicated that it will rule on the validity of the wage provisions of the lumber code.

Ten Per Cent Gain Listed In New Life Insurance

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—New life insurance written in 1934 showed an increase of 10.1 per cent over 1933 and the December volume was the highest for the year, showing a gain of 17.2 per cent over December, 1933, the Association of Life Insurance Presidents announced today.

The total new business of the 42 member companies for 1934 was $8,605,432,000, against $7,812,602,000 in 1933.

Kisses Cost Grocer $2,500 in Auto Crash

St. Louis, Jan. 23 (AP).—Victor Schwentker, grocer, had his arm around her and was kissing her when his automobile collided with another car, Miss Syble Porterfield, 22, testified in her damage suit against him.

She said she suffered a permanent injury to her left knee in the accident. A jury awarded her $2,500 damages.

Flexible Scale.

The plan, it was indicated, is to pay less than $50 in sections where living costs are low and slightly more where they are higher.

Later Connery said he considered $36 a week for skilled and $27 for unskilled workers a "fair and reasonable" wage.

"Workers at $50 a month," he complained, "would be scabs to organized labor."

Another vociferous objector, Representative Short (Republican), Missouri, silver-tongued former cleryman, drew cheers from both sides of the aisle as he dissected the measure. Laughter rang through the packed galleries as he declared:

"I deeply and sincerely regret that this body has degenerated into a supine, subservient, soporific, superfluous, supercilious, pusillanimous body of nitwits, the greatest ever gathered beneath the dome of our National Capitol, who cowardly abdicate their powers and in violation of their oaths to protect and defend the Constitution against all of the Nation's enemies, both foreign and domestic, turn over these constitutional prerogatives, not only granted but imposed upon them, to a group of tax-eating, conceited, autocratic bureaucrats—a bunch of theoretical, intellectual, professorial nincompoops out of Columbia University at the other end of Pennsylvania avenue, who were never elected by the American people to any office and who are responsible to no constituency.

Baltimore Asks McKeever Girl As Robber Aid

Federal Warrant Charges Complicity in Mais, Legenza Job.

Baltimore, Jan. 23 (AP).—A warrant charging Marie McKeever with complicity in the Hyattsville Armory robbery last June was issued by United States Commissioner James K. Cullen today and was immediately forwarded to Philadelphia authorities.

T. Barton Harrington, assistant United States attorney, who requested the warrant, sent an urgent request that the woman be returned here for trial.

Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, now under death sentence in Richmond, performed the raid on the armory. The Government contends that the McKeever woman was with them when the robbery was committed.

The warrant charges that she "did conceal, attempt to conceal, transport and possess two automatic rifles and four automatic pistols knowing same to have been stolen from the Maryland National Guard Armory on June 22, 1934, the same stolen articles being the property of the United States of America."

Two Men Arrested On 'Numbers' Charges

Two men accused as "numbers" operators were arrested on gaming charges yesterday in a store in the 1800 block of Seventh street northwest.

Warrants charged Jack Schwartz, 25, with permitting gaming and Nathan Lober, 35, with accepting a bet. A policeman, it was alleged, approached the pair and placed a "numbers" bet.

the presence of their mothers and acknowledged taking the car. The only question then was to determine what was the best course to pursue for the future of the boys. This depended to a large extent upon their past histories and their development. It is known to the court that one of the boys had been before the court on many charges and that both of them had recently been convicted of attempted theft of another automobile in Virginia.

"The court, in the exercise of its best judgment, committed the boys to the National Training School where a careful planning for their needs was assured them. A new trial will permit opportunity for full disclosure of all the evidence."

Parents Receive Custody.

Armed with a release prepared by court officers, the parents of the two boys went to the Training School and obtained custody of their sons. They carried with them a complete outfit of clothing so the youngsters would not have to return to their homes in the garb of the institution.

The case now stands thus: The boys are faced with a charge of taking an automobile (joy-riding). They are in the custody of their parents pending formal arraignment January 30. At that time they will be called upon to answer the charge by a plea of guilty or not guilty and the trial, in the event a not guilty plea is entered, will be started shortly afterward.

Ralph A. Cusick, attorney for the boys, last night intimated he might seek to have the boys taken into the District Supreme Court on the theory that their offense, if one there was, was within the jurisdiction of the higher court.

Prettyman Backs Move.

Miss Bentley refused Saturday to permit the boys to return to their homes pending the filing of a formal motion for a reversal of her decision. Mr. Cusick filed the motion Monday and Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman, representing the District Government, said he had no objection to a new hearing. He said he was inclined to believe every case involving a minor should be gone into thoroughly.

Meantime, Miss Bentley in a second child case, yesterday ordered that 6-year-old Betty Levia Lugaresi be given into the custody of her father, Terzo Lugaresi. The father was given the child by order of District Supreme Court Justice F. D. Letts. The girl's mother, Mrs. Nettie Lugaresi, filed a petition in Juvenile Court seeking custody, and Judge Bentley ordered the girl given to the Board of Public Welfare for three months. Yesterday she decided the father should have the daughter's custody.

Bus Parking Ban Hearings March 4

Utilities Officials to Thresh Out Terminal Problem.

A public hearing to determine whether busses operating wholly in the District and those linking the suburbs with the District, should be required to have off-street terminals will be held March 4, the Public Utilities Commission, it was announced yesterday.

Suburban buses and those of the Washington Rapid Transit Co. frequently use the streets for terminals at stoplover points. A conference of traffic officials held recently complained that the parking of buses in strets constitute a general interference with vehicular traffic.

The commission has also received many complaints from citizens against the practice. These objections are that the buses do not afford proper terminal facilities for protection of passengers against the weather.

We of Seagram recognize:

A SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY

Recently we printed an advertisement.

An advertisement that aroused attention.

It was entitled—

"We who make whiskey say: Drink Moderately."

Of the hundreds of letters we received—most of them commendatory—a few questioned the sincerity of that statement as opposing self-interest.

It is not against our self-interest to counsel moderation. It would be folly to do otherwise.

A Social Responsibility

Our statement—"Drink Moderately," was first prompted by what we sincerely regard as a social responsibility to the public, for our interest and the public interest are inseparably bound together.

This community of interest can best be served by a mutual observance of national, state and local laws, and by regarding whiskey as a luxury of life, the true enjoyment of which lies in moderation.

In the words of Lincoln: "The difficulty lies not so much in the use of a bad thing, as in the abuse of a very good thing."

Firmly we repeat, whiskey cannot take the place of bread and milk and meat—and we do not want a cent of any man's dollar that should be spent for the necessities of life.

Our Self-Interest

We have a motive of self-interest in the protection of the future of our business, our several thousand stockholders, our employees.

With three-quarters of a century of tradition behind it, Seagram, a year ago began building an American institution composed of distilleries, warehouses, distributing facilities and people.

As part of a reborn industry our business has become a part of the permanent, underlying industrial structure of America. Let us look at the facts.

We Open Our Books

In the past six months during which Seagram has been in full operation in America, we have paid to the U. S. Government in taxes on distilled spirits over fifteen million dollars.

To the various states, in this period, taxes on Seagram products brought over three million dollars.

New Jobs

The great boon of industry to man is work. The great need of America today is greater employment. What have these six months meant in jobs and payrolls?

Over $1,250,000 in payrolls was paid to 2,934 persons employed in Seagram's American plants and branches. In the plants of Seagram's American suppliers, many times this number of jobs were created.

From American farmers, we bought in these few months over a million and a quarter bushels of grain.

Other Industry Benefits

In practically every section of the country, industry after industry has benefited. Wholly aside from Seagram's continuing construction expenditure, here is what these six months have meant to American manufacturers and workers in just a few other industries.

Freight moved in and out of Seagram American distilleries, warehouses, and distributing points over American railroads, has been over 4,000 carloads.

Purchases from American glass plants amounted to well over three-quarters of a million dollars.

For just one month's supply of cartons, over 30 carloads of flat sheets were shipped from an American paper mill.

Thirteen tons of tin, seventeen tons of cork and ninety-one tons of aluminum were required in the production of bottle caps.

The Public's Interest—Our Interest

We hold to the view that we can best serve our interest by serving the public interest. Moderation protects the continued enjoyment of personal liberty. It best assures the continuance of an American industry and the returns it gives to Government, agriculture, industry and labor.

In the spirit of our social responsibility we again submit the cardinal principles of enlightened and mutual interest — LAW OBSERVANCE, MODERATION.

Carnegie Hero Medals Voted To Virginians

West Virginians Also Are Honored for Saving 2 From Drowning.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 23 (AP).—The Carnegie hero fund commission today awarded 14 bronze medals, four of them posthumously, in recognition of acts of heroism.

Among those rewarded was Mrs. Belle Patterson, 55, a housewife, of Lorton, W. Va., who climbed down an 18-foot well to save a child who had fallen in and was in danger of drowning.

Mrs. Patterson, a poor swimmer, descended by holding to niches in the wall of rough stone and came up again, carrying the child in one arm.

Another recognized was a 12-year-old girl, Suzanne A. Deel, who saved an older girl from drowning near the little mountain town of Arcola, W. Va.

Two of the heroes who lost their lives were machinists—William O. Sullivan of Norfolk, Va., and Max R. Yerkes, of Horseheads, N. Y.

Sullivan descended into a leaching tank filled with deadly gas, boosted up a Negro laborer who was overcome and lost his own life. Yerkes, unable to swim, tried to save a girl who fell from a bridge into a stream. Both drowned. Death benefits were awarded Sullivan's stepmother and Yerkes' widow.

The others posthumously recognized were Walter T. Madigan who drowned trying to save a fellow worker at Sault Sainte Marie, Mich., and Walter H. Fisher, 21, a dental laboratory helper, who died attempting to save a youth from drowning at Hollins, Va.

Lorton Growth Adds to Danger

Reformatory With 800 Capacity Now Has 1,255 Inmates.

Continual growth in the prison population at Lorton Reformatory is increasing the danger of an outbreak, Capt. M. M. Barnard, Superintendent of District Penal Institutions, reported yesterday to Elwood Street director of the Board of Public Welfare.

The reformatory, designed to house 800 lesser criminals, had 1,255 inmates including many hardened criminals, at the end of December, an increase of 37 over the month of November and 84 more than at the end of December, 1933.

Courts sent 35 men there during December, compared with 17 for the same month of 1933; while the total of all admissions in December was 24 more than in December, 1933.

There were only two inmates paroled in December, while there were 11 in November. Greater stringency in granting paroles was given as the reason for the decline.

Campbell Sails for U. S. To Set New Records

Southampton, England, Jan. 23 (AP).—Sir Malcolm Campbell sailed for America on the Aquitania today with the bulky, crated Bluebird with which he hopes to hang up new speed records on the sands of Daytona Beach, Fla., within the next few weeks.

He was accompanied by his wife and their daughter, Jean. After a fleeting visit to New York, Sir Malcolm and his party will hurry to Daytona Beach to begin preparations for his speed trials.

THEY tell me that he has flown 2,000,000 miles . . . His name is Dick Merrill, whose picture recently decorated the front pages with Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Eugene Meyer and Col. Eddie Rickenbacker in the record 6-hour-14-minute flight from New Orleans to Newark . . . Merrill was the pilot.

Merrill stopped the other night at the Hollywood to see his old friend, Sammy White . . . They met some years ago, Jockey Mack Garner introducing them when White was dancing in Ziegfeld's "Show Boat" and spending his free afternoons at the race track.

Most conservative of air pilots, he uses the race track as a safety valve for his emotions, too . . . Last summer, the blue-eyed Mississippian had the Saratoga bookmakers in a turmoil . . . He would fly in to Albany every afternoon, motor briskly to Saratoga, make his bets, collect his winnings and then hurry away . . . The bookies though he was some mystery millionaire . . . He won a nice bankroll, but on the last day, he lost every cent he'd won, and he gave it up as a bad business.

Recently Merrill flew Doug Fairbanks from Miami to New York . . . "I'll bet Doug got a great kick out of a night flight," I suggested . . . "He must have," said Merrill, "he slept like a log the entire trip" . . . I commented that that was the nicest compliment to the pilot: "No," said Dick, "I wanted to talk to him about moving pictures, darn it."

LIBBY HOLMAN patting bald-headed men of Shamokin, Pa., on their shiny pates in the town's vaudeville house, in a tabloid version of the late Texas Guinan revue . . . Libby Holman, making her debut in "Rainbow" on Broadway, and so near-sighted that Charlie Ruggles' valet had to lead her on and off the stage . . . She told me some of these things last night.

The incident of the bald-headed men of Shamokin, Pa., left a deep imprint on her imagination, as well it might . . . She played the role of Texas Guinan in the tabloid version of the show, "Padlocks of 1927," and to get the Guinan robustness, she would swagger through the audience, make a fuss over the bald-heads and imitate Guinan's famous "Hello, Sucker."

She escaped from this to go into the Vincent Youmans-Oscar Hammerstein-Larry Stallings Goodman musical play, "Rainbow" . . . She rehearsed the lead in this after four shows a day in the vaudeville unit . . . Busby Berkeley taught her dance routines, Youmans hurriedly composed a torch song for her to sing, but she didn't know the dance routines and hadn't had a single rehearsal of the song when she stepped into the role at Baltimore . . . If it hadn't been for Charlie Ruggles' valet, the nearsighted youngster wouldn't have had the nerve to go through with it . . . He led her from dressing room to stage and back again, and whispered to her the geography of the stage so that she wouldn't trip on stairs or crash over floor lamps . . . After all that effort, the show flopped when it returned to Broadway, a memorable occasion in Broadway annals, for one of the mules used in the play was directly responsible for the fiasco on opening night . . . Then came the first "Little Show," and her tremendous success with "Moanin' Low."

I asked her if she'd permit her youngster to go on the stage when he grew up: "Frankly, I'd prefer that he didn't, Ed," she said, "but if he is talented and determined he won't ask me."

ELIZABETH BERGNER, foreign actress, who premiered in "Escape Me Never" on Monday night, is pretty nearly the greatest actress I've ever seen on a stage. . . . The "pretty nearly" is inserted as a precaution because writers learn to be cagy. . . . Abandoning all caution and saying what is actually in my mind, she is the GREATEST actress I've ever seen. . . . Clifton Webb, Jules Glaenzer, Louis Marx and myself, cutting up smoke rings between acts, tried to explain what quality distinguishes the pint-sized, corn-haired German star. . . . "She flows through her part," said Glaenzer. . . . "She is absolutely fascinating," said Webb. . . . "She never gives you the impression that she is acting," said Marx. . . . Sum up the three impressions and you arrive at the composite truth. . . . Her second-act scene with her rival, over the tea cups, is high art.

Probe Ordered Into Purchase Unit of State

West Virginia Senator Charges Irregularities in Department.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 23 (AP). An investigation of the State Purchasing Department, set up at Gov. H. G. Kump's request as a step toward increased efficiency and economy, was ordered by the Senate today.

It acted upon assertions by Senator Millender (Democrat), of Wayne County, that there have been charges of "certain abuses and irregularities" under the administration of James A. Tierney, first State purchasing director.

As the Senate set the inquiry into motion, the House completed plans for another probe—into administration of relief in Randolph County.

Delegate Shahan (Democrat), of Randolph County, will head a group of five delegates investigating what Shahan says are "hundreds of charges" of irregularities in the relief administration.

While plans for the investigations went forward the Legislature took long steps toward liquor control—set up a committee of 43 members to hold public hearings on all plans proposed for regulation of liquor sales after repeal becomes effective March 1.

That committee will start action within a day or two.

A fire held the attention of the gallery in the House. Smoke filled the corridors of the capitol before the two Houses went into session. It came from a blaze in a janitor's store room. Damage was estimated at $200.

Mace Belittled

Maryland House Symbol Used as Hammer!

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—The mace, that ponderous stick of silver-capped ebony which symbolizes the power of the House of Delegates, was put to a new and ignominious use here today.

The secretary to the House was waiting for the Speaker to declare it in session, holding the mace ready to be put into its socket. Notice of bills ready for passage had to be tacked up on the front of the rostrum. The mace was swung, the tack up on the front of the rostrum first time it has ever served except as a symbol, according to the legislative old-timers.

Police Question Secret Witness In Dual Murder

Person Heard Shots and Sounds of Struggle at Chevy Chase.

A mystery witness, who heard shots, sounds of a struggle, the grinding of brakes and the roar of an automobile near the Chevy Chase Lake car barn Monday morning wae being questioned by Montgomery County police last night in connection with the slaying of two Capital Transit Co. employes.

Authorities refused to reveal anything about the witness.

Meanwhile, an autopsy on the body of Emory Smith, 45, of Bethesda, Md., one of the victims who was found in a creek some distance from the scene of the crime, revealed he died of a severed cranial artery.

This, authorities explained, meant he had been shot in the automobile from which his body was thrown. All garages and dry cleaning establishments were notified to watch for blood-stained clothing and automobiles with red stains on their upholstery.

Montgomery County police have released two men questioned Tuesday night, and a woman, who was held in the case.

Several articlse of clothing used by the bandits, who obtained about $1,800 during the killing and robbery, were held by officers.

Funeral services for James M. Mitchell, 38, one of the victims, will be held at the family residence, in the 200 block of Thirtieth street northeast, today at 10:30 a. m., and later in the Church of the Nativity. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements for Emory Smith have not been completed.

Building Urged For U. S. Files

Cochran Proposes Massive Warehouse for Papers.

Government correspondence under the New Deal has reached such proportions that a new Federal warehouse is needed to keep the letter files and other records, Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, revealed yesterday in announcing that he would offer a construction bill.

Many members of Congress are of the opinion that the Archives Building, now nearing completion, will act as a store house for all Government records. Cochran said, however, that its records would be confined to historical documents.

Cochran, who appeared before the House Appropriations Committee in the interest of his proposal, said he had made a survey which "shows the absolute necessity for the construction of such a building as I suggest."

The building should be located outside of the Federal Triangle, he said, and should cover two or three blocks and rise 12 stories.

U. S. Specialist Links Ladder To Carpenter

country. Light was beginning to dawn. There were several of them that reported they had a circular planing machine that contained one dull knife. At last Koehler obtained reports on the equipment in 1,598 planing mills.

Finds His Dull Knife.

Of them, 25 had defective knives. It was a problem then of narrowing down to the one specific mill with a planing machine that would make the marks found on the wood in the ladder. Weeks more went by, and one day Koehler found what he was looking for.

It was a dull knife in a planing machine in the J. J. Doran Co., McCormick, S. C., some time before the Doran Co. had shipped 45 carloads of lumber.

Its destination was the Bronx, New York City.

There the trail stopped—in the yard of the Great National Millwork & Lumber Co., and it might be there yet—because that concern sells lumber to hundreds of persons—had not another event, with which Koehler had nothing to do, occurred at that time. A $20 ransom bill was found on a man named Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

At last there were clews for Koehler to work with. Hauptmann was a carpenter; in his garage was a chest of tools. Koehler took his microscope up to the Bronx, got Hauptmann's tool chest out of the garage and went on an inspection tour of the house. Today he told what he had found.

A Missing Board.

The Hauptmann attic was a rough affair. The floor was made of laths and plaster. Beams ran across the attic and to those beams were nailed rough, unpainted planks. But down at one end of the attic Koehler noticed something.

One of the floor boards was missing—8 feet of it. He went over to the gap and this is what he saw:

Nail holes in the beam; therefore the board must have been put down when the rest of the floor was laid and then taken up again.

Sawdust on the plaster under the beam; therefore someone must have cut out that 8-foot section of board.

A fresh edge on the section of the board that still was nailed to the beam, conclusive evidence that somebody had needed 8 feet of board and had sawed it out of a plank in the floor.

The flooring was made of South Carolina pine. A quick check showed it had been shipped to the Great National Co. in the Bronx, by the Doran Co., down in South Carolina.

"Bring Me the Ladder."

The trial was getting hot.

"Bring me the ladder," Koehler ordered.

They brought in the ladder and took it to pieces. Koehler already knew that the right-hand rail of the third section of the ladder was made of South Carolina pine. He laid that piece of the ladder down on the beam and murmured his astonishment.

The old nail holes in the ladder piece fitted exactly over the nail holes in the beam. To prove it he took a nail and with only slight pressure thrust it through the hole in the ladder piece down into the beam.

Again Koehler got out his microscope. The ladder rail was stained and darkened by weather, and the floor board that had been sawed off was clean. But he wasn't interested in appearances. He was interested in the grain of the wood.

The Grain Matches

"And what did you find?" asked Attorney General Wilentz, while everybody in the courtroom strained to hear the answer.

"I found," Koehler replied, "that the grain in the two pieces of wood matched perfectly. Here is an enlarged picture that will show what I mean."

"And what else did you find, Mr. Koehler?"

"I found that the age rings in the two pieces of wood corresponded. That means that these two pieces of wood probably grew in the same tree. Certainly they are of the same age and must have been cut at the same time."

Now Koehler turned to the Hauptmann tool chest. First he brought out a plane—a big, yellow piece of wood with a steel blade thrust through it. He showed the jury photographs of the peculiar markings that this plane left on the wood used in the ladder.

Then he took another piece of wood, laid it on the judge's bench and began to shave it with Hauptmann's plane. The shavings fell at the feet of Justice Thomas W. Trenchard. Hauptmann leaned forward, his lips in a tight, straight line. Col. Lindbergh was vastly interested.

The Nicks Show Up.

"This isn't a very good plane," Koehler remarked as he shaved away. "It's dull."

Finally he was through and he showed the jury the results of his labor. Plainly there on the board were the same little nicks that showed up in the photograph of the planing done on the wood in the ladder.

"Now, as to Hauptmann's saw," Koehler said.

Once more he brought out photographs of tiny nicks in boards—trivial gouges that spoke a language all their own to Koehler.

"I find," he said, "that this saw out of the defendant's tool chest is the one that was used to saw the boards that were used in this ladder."

"Now," said Attorney General Wilentz softly, reluctant to snap the spell that this man's story had cast, "there was something about a chisel, wasn't there?"

A Chisel Missing.

"Yes," Koehler said. "There was a three-quarter-inch chisel missing from Hauptmann's tool chest."

"Can you tell me the size of the chisel that was found outside Col. Lindbergh's home after the kidnaping?"

"It was a three-quarter-inch chisel."

"From the marks on the wood in the ladder, can you say as to what kind of chisel was used in constructing it."

"Yes, it was a three-quarter-inch chisel."

Through three earlier witnesses—Detective Lewis J. Bornmann, of the New Jersey State police, and two New York Police Department carpenters, Charles F. W. Enkler and Anselm Cramer—the prosecution had established that a board was missing from the attic and that the attic itself could be reached with difficulty only through Hauptmann's apartment after one had taken down the shelves of a linen closet.

Tomorrow Hauptmann's lawyers have their chance at cross-examination of Koehler, when they will tear into his tightly knit tale and try to leave it as scattered and helpless as the shavings that curled and fell from the big yellow plane in the courtroom today. Thus it seems improbable that the prosecution can rest and the defense begin its side of the story before late tomorrow.

President to Tell Plan for Resources

ernment to private interests for transatlantic passenger service.

Training Ship Requested.

The report further asks for a second, smaller airship for the Navy, for training purposes. It also recommends increasing the number of Army and Navy planes to 4,000, which would in effect double the strength of the two air forces.

The Clark Commission, reviewing the air mail, favors abolishing the distinction between primary and secondary routes. Its members, apparently undeterred by airship catastrophies of the past, urge further experimentation along this line.

In this connection, Pan-American Airways and several other companies have suggested to the Navy Department the construction of landing facilities on Wake Island, halfway between Midway Island and Guam in the Pacific, Secretary Claude A. Swanson disclosed.

The Cabinet officer also said the Navy is considering landing facilities on Midway Island, and that he has no objection to a commercial airport at Guam. The Pan-American proposal is for a projected passenger line from California to Canton, China.

Virginia Native, 113, Buried

Peter Rakes Interred at Davy, W. Va.; Worked in Coal Fields Till 110; Served With Lee at Richmond Siege.

Richlands, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Peter Rakes, who was believed to be the oldest native son of the Old Dominion and oldest citizen of West Virginia, was buried this week at Davy, W. Va., where he died, aged 113.

"Uncle Peter" Rakes, as he was familiarly known throughout Tazewell County, Va., and McDowell County, W. Va., was born where the town of Richlands now stands when the Monroe Doctrine was in the making, Febrary 11, 1821, and spent his entire life here and in the Davy community of McDowell County.

Until he was 110, "Uncle Peter" held a regular job in the coal fields. He often told how, when he volunteered for service in the Confederate army, he was turned down as "too old." Later he was accepted and served three years, being with Lee at the siege of Richmond.

He is survived by his third wife, who is 75.

ing automobile and the five sped away.

Reid told police that during the ride he was constantly menaced by his captors and that when he attempted to get a glimpse of them from beneath his blindfold, he was told:

"Don't look at me or I'll let you have it."

One man sat on either side of him, he said, holding pistols against his ribs.

Reports Robbery.

On departure of the bandits Reid succeeded in freeing himself, hailed a passing motorist and came to Fall River to report the robbery.

The Postoffice Department, through John J. Breslin, chief of the New England postal inspection division, immediately offered rewards totaling $10,000, or $2,000 for information resulting in arrest and conviction of each of the five robbers. Conviction would carry a mandatory sentence of 25 years' imprisonment.

The loot consisted of bank notes and silver, being sent by the Federal Reserve Bank in Boston to the B. M. C. Durfee Trust Co., of Fall River. The hold-up occurred before it had passed through the Fall River postoffice.

Rites Held for Mrs. Avery.

Funeral services for one of Southeast Washington's oldest residents, Mrs. Cora O. Avery, were held yesterday at her home, 715 G street southeast. Interment took place in Congressional Cemetery. Mrs. Avery, who was 84 years old and the widow of James D. Avery, died at home Monday.

11 Sentenced for Failure To Prevent Kiroff Death

Moscow, Jan. 23 (U.P.).—The military collegium of the supreme court tonight sentenced Feodor Medved, chief of the Leningrad interior ministry office, and 11 assistants to concentration camps for "criminal carelessness" in failing to prevent the assassination of Sergei Maronovich Kiroff, political bureau leader, last month.

Medved and his aids also were accused of failure to break up the so-called "Leningrad Center," a terrorists' organization. They admitted their guilt. The longest term, ten years, was given M. K. Baltsevitch, held directly responsible for permitting terrorism. Medved and four others were given three years and the others two years each.

Board Orders Utility Reports On Rate Bases

Companies Told to Reveal Moneys Paid Over to Parent Firms.

All utility companies were ordered yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission to file with it statements of moneys paid to the present companies and the costs of preparing such statements.

The objective of the ordes is to determine how much, if any, of the payments made to the parent companies is charged to operating expenses, which are used as a basis for rate fixation.

Most of the local utility corporations are owned, in part, by larger utility corporations which are deemed "foreign" to the District by the commission.

The order was sent to the following companies: Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., controlled by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.; the Washington & Georgetown Gas Light Companies, owned by the Washington & Suburban Companies; the Capital Transit Co., 51 per cent owned by the North American Co.; and the Washington Railway & Electric Co. and the Potomac Electric & Power Co., both of which are controlled by the NoNrth American Co.

Through these statements, the commission hopes to obtain all data reported to the parent companies by the subsidiaries.

11-Inch Snow Snarls Traffic; Many Accidents

the remainder were assigned to work on the huge drifts.

At 2 a. m. plows and graders and thousandr of workers, armed with their shovels, were concentrated in the area affected by the 2 to 9 a. m. traffic ban. The purpose was to clear these main traffic arteries to the downtown district before the morning rush began.

In all, it was estimated, the emergency work alone due to yesterday's snowfall cost the District between $15,000 and $20,000.

Traffic a Snail.

Traffic crept through the city yesterday and last night motorists groped their way through the snow.

Street cars moved slowly and were tied up temporarily in many places. By 6 p. m., however, the Capital Transit Co. reported all of its lines were in operation except on outlying Wisconsin avenue where it was impossible to get power from semifrozen, snow-caked overhead wires.

The Transit Co. put 500 extra men, 38 sweepers and 23 scrapers to work.

At 1 p. m. all elementary schools were closed, with junior and high schools and vocational schools dismissing classes half an hour later. All employes of the Board of Education were dismissed at 2:30 p. m., and District Building employes at 3. All Treasury Department employes who could be spared were let off at 3 p. m., and the same condition prevailed at the Labor Department.

Work Day Ends Early.

Most employes at the War, Navy and Commerce Departments were allowed to go home at 3:30 p. m.

The slippery, treacherous streets and the blinding whirl of the snow caused numerous accidents.

Henry LeRoy Dement, 38, of the 700 block of E street southeast, a worker in the District Refuse Department, suffered a broken neck and a possible skull fracture when the snow scoop on a tractor fell upon him as he was cranking the engine. He was taken to Providence Hospital, where physicians held slight hope for his recovery.

Struck by a skidding automobile as she stood on a loading platform at Seventeenth and H streets northwest, Mrs. Margaret York, of the 800 block of B street northeast, suffered a fractured pelvis. She was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Struck by Car.

Bruises were suffered by Patrick Condon, 28, of the 4500 block of River road northwest, when he was struck by an automobile at Fessenden street and Wisconsin avenue. He was taken to Georgetown Hospital.

Struck by a truck near her home, Sylvia Headon, 17, of the 4500 block of Wisconsin avenue, suffered several fractured ribs. She was taken to Georgetown Hospital.

Pedestrians slipped and fell on District sidewalks, but for the most part they found the drifting snow a useful cushion.

Patrolman James M. Peterson, 62, attached to the Seventh Precinct, slipped and fell while patrolling his beat. He was given first-aid for a sprained hip.

Telephone and light service remained unimpaired throughout the storm.

While most of mature Washington considered its own problems resulting from the heavy snow, the youngsters were remembered by the police.

Streets Blocked Off.

Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, assistant chief of police, issued orders blocking certain streets so that they would be safe for coasters. No coasting accidents had been reported to police late last night.

During yesterday afternoon's storm citizens downtown heard the jingle of sleigh bells, and peering from office windows saw a two-horse sleigh, filled with Washingtonians enjoying an old-fashioned winter outing.

Winter struck Maryland with its hardest blast of the season, leaving one dead, blocked roads, crippled communications, a blanket of a foot or more snow and winds threatening to reach blizzard proportion.

Jacob N. Barnhouse, 45-year-old farmer, was killed at Point of Rocks by a freight engine while he was working with a Baltimore & Ohio Railroad crew to keep the tracks clear. The noise of a torch he was using drowned the sound of an approaching engine, which struck him.

In upper Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties farmers a residents in villages were snowbound.

In Arlington and Fairfax Counties officials warned against slippery roads. Bus service continued, drivers nosing their vehicles cautiously through the temporary mountains and valleys winter had built.

King Winter wore an icy crown in Dixie. After enjoying brief relief from the rigors of the northwest blizzard, Gulf Coast States last night slipped back into the clutches of bitter cold. The mercury sank in the snowbound sections of Louisiana, Arkansas, Alabama and Tennessee. In the South at least 12 deaths were attributed to the cold and floods, the Associated Press reported.

Florida Fruit Menaced.

The mercury nose-dived in every section of Florida, menacing the citrus crops. Snow fell all day in seven Florida cities. The forecast was for 20 degrees in Louisiana and slightly less than freezing weather along the Gulf Coast.

The Weather Bureau here said Washington's snow blazed its trail of white from Virginia and the Southeast. Rain in the Carolinas turned to snow over the Old Dominion.

In the Northwest the cold paralyzed communication lines in Minnesota, where work on the outside was halted, and schools in many parts of the State were closed. Eveleth, with a reading of 51 degrees below zero, was the coldest point in the coldest State.

New York Fall Heavy.

A new snow mantle stretched from Ohio to New England, and New York put more than 32,000 men to work shovelling more than 11 inches of snow.

The Pacific Coast, already raked by a 60-mile gale, prepared for a new blow. Transcontinental railroads through the Cascades were cut off, or forced to move at a snail's pace.

Latin Americans Swelter.

Buenos Aires, Jan. 23 (AP).—A wide section of South America sweltered in midsummer heat today. Buenos Aires' heat wave was broken by winds from the cold southern seas, temperatures here dropping to 68, but Cordoba, Argentina, reported 105 degrees.

System of Compensating Jailers Amounts to 'Trafficking in Human Misery,' Asserts Welfare Commissioner James.

By Warren A. McNeill
(Associated Press Staff Writer).

Richmond, Va., Jan. 23.—"Trafficking in human misery" is the term which the State department of public welfare applies to the existing system of compensating jailers.

"Of course," says Commissioner Arthur W. James, "it is patent that the entire Virginia jail system should be reorganized, but until this can be brought to pass, at least the system of compensating jailers can be abolished.

"What we have now is a bounty system—the premium being paid for incarcerating the greatest number of prisoners and keeping them the greatest number of days."

The department's bureau of jail accounts, headed by Russell B. DeVine, is described as having for its primary purpose the acquisition and use of penological data, with particular reference to the 98 county and 16 city jails of the State.

Inmates Classified.

Every jailer is required to submit on the first of each month a jail card for each prisoner in his jail the preceding month. These are classified in the bureau as to white, colored, juvenile, male or female, State, city and Federal prisoners, and after this data has been taken off they are filed according to localities to await comparison with the accounts of the jailers. The juvenile cards, however, are turned over to the department's children's bureau.

From the study the bureau already has made, Commissioner James believes the following matters of accounting should be corrected by legislative action:

"1. Payment for detention of so-called insane prisoners on a premium basis should be discontinued. A number of jailers include them in their regular account—all of them should be required to.

"2. Payment of second committal fees should be discontinued. Two to six commital fees are frequently charged against one prisoner.

"3. Separate accounts should be abolished where counties and cities use the same jail.

"4. Separate accounts for a city jail and jail farm should be abolished.

"5. The practice of certain local officials of classifying prisoners who can pay their fines as 'local prisoners' and those who can not as 'State prisoners' should be abolished.

"6. Separate accounts for one or two prisoners detained in jail for another county should be done away with."

City Commitments Top List.

Although only about one-fourth of the State's population lives in cities, the studies of the jail accounts bureau has shown that in the fiscal year 1933-34 commitments to the 16 city jails outnumbered those to all county jails by approximatley 2,300.

Total commitments for the year were 27,843 to county jails, 30,395 to city jails and 2,772 to jail farms. The total of 61,010 commitments during this year compared with 62,842 for the preceding fiscal year.

Beginning last June, Commissioner De Vine, assisted by Roy K. Flannagan, assistant State health commissioner and medical adviser to the Department of Public Welfare, began a systematic study of the jail situation in Virginia. The purpose of this, says Commissioner James, is to "really diagnose the present system, penologically, economically and otherwise, in order to develop on a factual basis a constructive, practical plan of reorganization and modernization."

It is planned to have this study completed long enough in advance of the next session of the General Assembly so that its findings will be available for the guidance of that body in framing new legislation.

(In the next article of this series to be published by The Post Saturday, the work of the medical adviser to the State department of public welfare will be outlined.)

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

Illness Fatal To Miss Wright At Capital Home

Was Member of Staff of Congressional Library for Years.

Miss Helen Wright, 76, of Florida avenue and Twenty-third street northwest, for many years attached to the staff of the Congressional Library, died yesterday of heart disease at her home after a brief illness.

A native of Newark, Ohio, Miss Wright early moved to Columbus, Ohio, with her family. Her father was Brig. Gen. George B. Wright, commissary general for Ohio in the Civil War.

As a little girl she heard Gen. Wright tell of President Lincoln's Gettysburg address. He sat on the platform at the famous battlefield, not far from the speaker.

Held Important Posts.

For more than three decades she held important posts on the Congressional Library staff here. First she was in the division of fine arts, where she remained until 1932. Then she was put on special assignments.

During the Panama-Pacific Exposition, in San Francisco in 1915, Miss Wright served as assistant manager in the fine arts division. She made a phenominal number of sales of pictures by living artists and won high praise from the director of the division.

Funeral Rites Tomorrow.

Miss Wright was active in various artistic and social organizations here, chief o fwhich were the Arts Club, the Literary Society of Washington, the American Federation of Arts, the Ohio State Society and the Archeological Society.

Surviving Miss Wright are her sister-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Wright, of Bucknell University, Lewisburg, Pa.; her brother-in-law, Frank C. Eaton, of New York City and two nephews.

Funeral services will be held at Lee's funeral chapel tomorrow at 11 a. m. Burial will be in Newark, Ohio.

Canadian Cattle Arrive In Chicago Mart Again

Chicago, Jan. 23 (AP).—Three carloads of Canadian cattle, the first seen on the Chicago market since 1929, arrived here today and sold for an average of $7.75 a hundred pounds.

The shipment was regarded as a "trial shipment" since consignments of Canadian cattle have been considered unprofitable because of tariffs. The recent advance of cattle prices, however, forecast further Canadian arrivals. Because of the tariff, it was estimated the shippers realized from $3.25 to $3.50 a hundred.

Senate Group Favors R. F. C.

Approves 2-Year Extension Limits Mortgage Lending to $100,000,000.

A two-year extension of the life of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was approved yesterday by the Senate Banking Committee, the Associated Press reported.

In favorably reporting legislation, it made changes in the present law to limit the amount the RFC could put into mortgage-lending institutions to $100,000,000, instead of leaving the amount unlimited, and to extend the amount for aiding insurance companies from $60,000,000 to $75,000,000.

Mainwhile liberalization of the corporation's loans-to-industry program was recommended to the House Banking Committee by Stanley Reed, RFC counsel.

Retaining the present $300,000,000 limit on industrial loans, Reed suggested that instead of "adequate security" the law be changed so that advances would "be so secured as to reasonabl assure repayment."

Labor Board Holds Hearing on Appeal Of Langdon Firm

The National Labor Relations Board held a brief closed hearing yesterday afternoon on an appeal from an order of its Baltimore regional board in the case of the Langdon Mill and Lumber Co., of 2150 Bryant street northeast. The regional board had ordered the company last November to reinstate nine employes discharged on May 18, 1934, allegedly for union activities.

Counsel for the company, Walter B. Guy and Louis H. Mann, argued that operating costs figures showed that the new crew hired since then were more efficient than the discharged union men. The company's president, Lester F. Kirchner, said the firm had volunteered to reinstate the men, but that the offer had been rejected by the union because of differences ovr th wage scale.

Robert Reichard, counsel for the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Local No. 1694, which represented the discharged men, rested on the Baltimore hearings, and noted that the company had advertised for non-union men just before the discharges. The testimony brought out the fact that the company had been operating a closed shop prior to May, 1934, but had then had different ... with the union on a petition for increased wages.

The hearing was held in the new Labor Department Building. Decision will probably be handed down within a week or 10 days.

A MESSAGE TO THE MANY THOUSAND WASHINGTON OWNERS OF GENERAL ELECTRIC REFRIGERATORS WITH FIVE OR MORE YEARS OF SERVICE!

It's not often we hear from you, inasmuch as the "sealed in steel" mechanism of your General Electric Refrigerator seldom, if ever, requires adjustment and has amply demonstrated the literal truth of what we told you five or more years ago when you made your purchase . . . that a General Electric can be installed and forgotten.

During the five or more years since you bought your refrigerator, however, the exterior has possibly become soiled and worn. So today it may need a little modern beauty treatment. We will make this special offer to our old friends during the next thirty days. We will bring in your refrigerator—loan you another while we are completely refinishing yours—and for only $23.00* for the average household size, we will completely refinish your refrigerator—using the same equipment as at the factory—returning it to you looking just as it did the day it was first delivered to you many years ago. (You can pay on our installment plan if you wish.)

So basic and sound was and is the design of the G-E Monitor Top refrigerator that outside of minor improvements, which occur in any product, the refrigerator we sold five or more years ago is still thoroughly modern—the unusual then is common practice today. With the refinishing service we are offering, our customers will have the equivalent of a brand new refrigerator.

"Quality lives long after price is forgotten."

Senate Inquiry Seeking to Have C. L. Bardo Testify on Shipbuilding Deal.

(Associated Press.)

A startled former president of a major shipbuilding company was asked yesterday at the Senate Munitions Committee hearing to waive his constitutional right to refuse to give "self-incriminating" testimony.

The demand was made of C. L. Bardo, one-time president of the New York Shipbuilding Co., whose present officers have been questioned at length as to profits made on shipbuilding both during the war and since. The committee gave no indication as to the testimony it expected from Bardo, but it inquired during the day into charges of collusion in acquiring naval shipbuilding contracts.

Gets 24 Hours on Waiver.

Bardo was given 24 hours to decide whether he would sign the waiver. Should he sign, his testimony could be used in subsequent criminal proceedings.

"This is the first time I have been asked to do this," Bardo told the Senate committee after its request for the waiver.

"I have no apprehensions as to testifying or as to the evidence I will give."

The committee, learning that E. L. Cord, aviation and ship-building magnate, was on a world cruise, took under advisement whether to ask him to return to give testimony.

Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, chairman of the Senate Committee, said if the committee decided to summon Cord, now reported cruising in his yacht some place in the Mediterranean, he would be questioned as to the financial set-up of the New York company and details of the deal by which he took control in August, 1933.

Nye Silent On Bardo Move.

Asked what evidence he expected from Bardo which necessitated the waiver of immunity, Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, replied:

"I can not tell you."

While the Senate Committee pursued reports that agreements have had something to do with increased costs of cruiser construction in recent years, the House Military Affairs Committee was told by an American Legion spokesman that profits were a primary motive for war.

Frank Belgrano, jr., national commander of the legion, said if there had been legislation in 1917 to take the profit out of war, "there would be no demand for the bonus now."

The committee has before it a bill to take the profits out of war.

Belgrano said "if the profit is taken out of war, we won't have war."

Roosevelt to Get Forestry Medal

President Roosevelt is to receive the Schlich Memorial Medal for his achievements in the advancement of forestry, it was learned yesterday. The President will be the first American receiving this medal, an award of the Society of American Foresters.

The presentation will be made at the White House at noon on Tuesday by H. H. Chapman, president of the society, which will hold its thirty-fourth annual meeting here from Monday until Wednesday.

"President Roosevelt's interest in the forestry program and the great strides made developing a national forest policy during his Administration have contributed more to the cause of forestry than anything in years," Franklin W. Reed, executive secretary of the society, said yesterday.

Dr. Bowerman Says Inebriates Annoy Library

Protests Granting Liquor License to Applicant on K Street.

There is so much trouble with drunkenness at the Central Public Library, Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian, told the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday, that the one policeman assigned there between 1:30 and 9 p. m. has more than he can handle.

Dr. Bowerman, who appeared at the board to protest the granting of a license to Samuel J. Ally at 804 K street, declared that there has been a great increase in the number of intoxicated persons ejected from the building since the legalization of liquor.

The library head, who appeared under instructions from the Board of Library Trustees, told the board that there were 16 establisments within one block of the library which already have liquor licenses. Of these, he said, nine have licenses to sell distilled liquors.

Patrolman E. A. Fuller of the Second Precinct, testified in support of Dr. Bowerman's contention that there had been an increase in the number of arrests for drunkenness in and about the library.

The board deferred action of the case. George W. Offutt, chairman of the ABC board, said there was a question in the minds of the board as to whether a license should be issued because of the number already outstanding in the vicinity and because the library is patronized by hundreds of children as well as adults.

Feed the Birds Grain, Bread, Suet In Clear Places

The heavy snowfall has covered the natural food supply of Washington's bird and many face starvation unless food is put out for them.

Mrs. L. D. Miner, member of the executive committee of the Audubon Society, yesterday issued a call to Washingtonians to feed the birds in their neighborhood.

Birds, Mrs. Miner said, will be delighted to get grain, bread crumbs and especially pieces of suet. Food should not be thrown into the deep snow, but placed on cleared places. Lumps of suet may be tied to tree branches.

Japanese Troops Battle in China

prepared to proceed with the "pacification" of Chahar.

The excuse given is that rebel Chinese irregular troops, under Gen. Sung Che-Yuan, had organized an independent state in desolate Chahar and threatened to invade Jehol Province.

The fighting began at 6 p. m. Tuesday, when Japanese artillery began shelling Chinese positions near the Great Wall.

Official dispatches from Kalgan said the Chinese had checked the attack Wednesday night. Reinforcements were rushed to their aid, however, and with armored cars, artillery and bombing planes the attack proceeded.

The Chiense had little hope of holding out against the modern Japanese war machine, and unless aid from outside is given—which they no longer expect—it appears Chahar's fate would follow that of the rest of the Manchurian provinces, eventually being absorbed into Manchukuo.

Confession Bared In Gang Massacre

Hayes, former convict; James Clark, brother-in-law of Moran; John May, garage mechanic; Albert Weinshank, and Dr. Einhardt H. Schwimmer.

The whole plot was a story of the familiar "double-cross," the effort of Al Capone to maintain control of a dog track at Lyons, Ill., which one of his affiliates, Frank Uale, Chicago and New York gangster, coveted. Uale was reported to have thrown his allegiance to Moran, North Side leader, in attempts to "cut in" on the dog track and Capone hired "Killer" Burke and others to protect his interest.

Moran's headquarters were in a North Clark street garage. For days Bolton was reported to have watched the place and then given the alarm when he saw Moran's cohorts enter, Moran with them. The killers entered, two dressed in police uniforms, unlimbered machine guns, lined up their victims, and blazed away. Moran disappeared and has since "retired."

Arrests and alibis followed and no solution was forthcoming, although at that time Police Lieut. Frank Cusack said ballistics tests pointed to Bolton, former Navy machine gunner.

Meanwhile, hunt for Alvin Karpis, desperate co-leader of the Karpis-Barker gang wanted for the $200,000 kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul brewer, centered in the Midwest as Federal agents, police and sheriffs' officers by the hundred followed every slim clew and report.

Shoplifting Charge Holds Two Women

Clothing Valued at $2,500 Recovered in Hotel.

Alleged by police to have long records, including arrests in New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Baltimore, two women were seized in a downtown hotel early yesterday at the request of Philadelphia officials, who want them on a charge of shoplifting.

They registered as Hattie Heagen, 42, and Vivian Mary Petersen, 23, and gave their home addresses as Norfolk, Va., The women were located and trailed to their hotel by Detective Sergts. C. E. Warfield and J. J. Tolson, who recovered allegedly stolen clothing valued at $2,500 in their room.

According to authorities, their methods are to return stolen goods by mail and ask for cash refunds. Throughout the East they are known, police said, as the "Patterson sisters." A Philadelphia detective arrived late yesterday to arrange for their return to that city.

Just what is meant by cross-blending tobaccos . . . and how does it make a cigarette milder and taste better . . .

Well, in blending you take two or more tobaccos and mix them together—a rather simple process. But cross-blending goes a step further . . .

IN making Chesterfields we take Bright tobacco from Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida. We take Burley tobacco from Kentucky and Tennessee, and tobacco from Southern Maryland.

Then in addition to these home-grown tobaccos we take tobacco grown in Turkey and Greece.

We balance these mild, ripe home-grown tobaccos with the right amounts and the right kinds of aromatic Turkish.

Then, instead of just mixing the tobaccos together, we blend and cross-blend them so that all the different flavors go together into one full flavor—the Chesterfield taste that so many smokers like.

Cross-blending tobaccos as it is done in Chesterfields gives the cigarette a pleasing taste and aroma—they're mild and yet They Satisfy.

Playing Both Ends.

President Roosevelt has very properly expressed resentment over the reservation proposing that a two-thirds Senate vote must be obtained before submission to the World Court, in the event of our adherence, of any issue affecting the United States.

The proposal is an intolerable infringement on the executive prerogative. It would expand the treaty-making power of the Senate in a manner at variance with both the letter and spirit of our Constitution. And it would of course result in repudiation of American adherence by other Court members, who want the institution to be a Court of International Justice and not the bad joke this reservation would tend to make it.

It is highly instructive that the Senate minority efforts to avert membership should take diametrically opposite lines. Here is Senator Norris arguing that the Court should be deprived of any real jurisdiction and placed under political control. In 1923 Senator Borah, likewise an opponent of our membership, was asserting that: "I am thoroughly, enthusiastically in favor of the United States becoming a member of an international court provided it is a court, and relieved from the control and domination of the political manipulators of Europe or any other country."

Senator Borah would enter the Court if it has real jurisdiction and is free from the political control of bodies like our Senate. Senator Norris would enter the Court if it has no jurisdiction and is placed under the control of a minority of our Senate. That is the sort of opposition and that is the sort of absurdly contradictory argument which for 12 years has been bandied about the Senate floor on this subject.

The 'Hot Oil' Bill.

The Senate has passed a bill to prevent, without prohibiting, interstate shipments of so-called "hot oil" produced in violation of State laws. The measure is designed to replace Section 9(c) of the recovery act, declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court on the ground that the law failed to set forth specifically the executive policy to be followed, and to describe the conditions under which such authority might be exercised.

The new bill has been criticised by some Senators on the ground that it does not, in their opinion, meet the objections raised by the Supreme Court. That is a question which a layman would not presume to judge, but it can at least be said that the measure which the Senate has approved is a much more moderate piece of legislation than Section 9(c) of the recovery act. This prohibited outright the interstate shipment of "hot oil." The proposed substitute would limit such prohibitions to oil produced in violation of State laws and would, therefore, constitute no such interference with shipments between States as its predecessor.

It is to be hoped that Congress will take to heart the rebuke administered inferentially by the Supreme Court in calling attention to the need for delimiting and defining legislative grants of power to the Executive. While the power of Congress to vest a large discretion in the executive branch of government may be greater in cases involving appropriation measures than in those which affect commerce between the States, its sense of legislative responsibility should be no less keen in the former case. If broad powers to spend are granted, the Legislature should always take care that the general authorization is not unduly vague or excessively liberal.

The Golden Fleece.

Apparently King Zog has been seeing too many American movies depicting royalty. The mythical kingdoms of DeMille and the gay courts of Lubitsch have made his life of single blessedness in Albania seem pretty dull. It has evidently just occurred to him that he is not living in the style to which all kings should become accustomed. Perhaps George Barr McCutcheon's tales of troubled kingdoms and American rescuers have had something to do with it, too.

At any rate, the only bachelor monarch in Europe is openly in the market for an heiress bride, preferably American, to help him finance and modernize his small mountain kingdom. In the good old days of the Graustarkian romances between commoners and those of royal blood, it was the men who did the rescuing. But that is all changed. Now it is all good women who are expected to come to the aid of the country.

King Zog frankly likes the business of being king with all its pomp, trappings and fanfare. He affects flaring red trousers, high white riding boots and flowing capes. He could have remained President of Albania, to which office he was proclaimed in 1925 by the National Assembly, but he preferred the title of royalty. Accordingly, he had himself crowned king in a spectacular coronation in 1928.

But King Zog is finding that all is not gold that glitters and even kingly credit does not last forever. Therefore, he has decided to take unto himself a wife with a million-dollar-a-year income. More than that, she must have brains, foresight and personal charm. King Zog is not only a romanticist but an extremist. That combination is scarcer than hens' teeth. However, "my kingdom for a bride" is such a romantic appeal in this humdrum machinery age that we are inclined to step forward with a suggestion. Will anyone with any good addresses please notify King Zog, whose address is Royal Palace, Tirina, Albania?

The Judicial Temperament.

Evidence of mental stature and a truly judicial temperament are found in Judge Fay Bentley's decision to grant a new trial to the two lads whom she had committed to the National Training School for taking an automobile which did not belong to them. In cases of this kind there is always a strong inclination to stand upon judgments already rendered. Judge Bentley's admission that she may have erred indicates that she possesses in large measure one of the most essential characteristics of a juvenile court judge.

"A new trial," says Judge Bentley, "will permit opportunity for full disclosure of all the evidence." In this sentence she implies that the complete evidence was not before the court when the commitments were made. For that kind of procedure the court has been justly criticized. Judge Bentley has accepted the criticism in the same spirit in which it was made. She has placed the welfare of the two boys and of other children who will be taken before her court above any feeling of false pride. This must be considered a triumph of mind over emotion that is of no little significance.

In view of this commendable spirit on the part of Judge Bentley it would be a pity if any effort should now be made to remove the Penn-Fanning case from the jurisdiction of the Juvenile Court. Cases of this kind ought to be settled without the formality of prosecution and defense, completely away from the atmosphere of lexal technicalities. Hearings should be thorough, of course, but they should be concerned with fathoming the characters of the offending boys and determining what sort of treatment will most effectively turn them from dangerous paths. Only a juvenile court experienced in meeting such problems should be entrusted with their solution.

Authorities must be careful also to avoid any detraction from the prestige of the Juvenile Court. There is plenty of evidence to show that the court should have more and not less influence and discretion in handling cases in which children are involved. If the interest aroused in the court by this case results in the enactment of a modern juvenile court statute for the District a net gain will have been made.

In the mentime final disposition of the Penn-Fanning case should be watched dispassionately. Release of the two boys should not be in any way construed as exoneration for their offense. If the judgment of the court should be modified, special safeguards may be necessary to make certain that the boys will not emerge as heroes from the incident. A false impression that the public wishes to protect them from the consequences of their wrongdoing would probably be more detrimental than an overdose of discipline at the Training School.

A Hopeful Rebellion.

The revolt of the Democratic minority, resulting in a liberalization of the "gag" rule under which it had been expected that the $4,800,000,000 work relief bill would be rushed through the House, shows that that body is still functioning, albeit feebly, as a deliberative assembly.

Under the compromise reached with the insurgents, it is true, only three controversial sections will be open for amendment from the floor, while the President's request for a lump-sum appropriation would be permitted to stand unchallenged. Moreover, there is little reason to think that the House rebellion is due to any compelling wish to safeguard the legislative branch of Government against executive usurpation of power. On the contrary, it seems to have been largely animated by a desire on the part of the legislators to have a hand in the disposition of what looks like an exceptionally large pork barrel.

From the point of view of economy and efficiency in the disbursement of funds to be spent for work relief, it is doubtless better that executive discretion should prevail over legislative direction. Nevertheless, that does not excuse the executive branch of Government from an obligation to show clearly what disposition it plans to make of the billions it has asked Congress to appropriate. Nor does the fact that some Congressmen may be animated by sordid motives justify abdication of powers vested in the legislative branch of government.

The House leaders who naively assured members of the Democratic caucus that they had been elected to support the President, and to provide relief for the needy, seem oblivious to the fact that Congress is supposed to give close and critical analysis to executive projects. The revolt should serve a constructive purpose by directing attention to this elementary political fact, and by reminding the Administration that this is a Government in which the executive, legislative and judicial branches of government are coequal.

Lawmaking by executive decree is not the only alternative to irresponsible congressional legislative activity. Indeed, the best way to prevent Congress from acting in an irresponsible fashion is for the Administration to accompany all of its recommendations with clear-cut plans which can be discussed on their merits, and only on their merits.

Authority To Borrow.

Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee has introduced a bill to authorize the Treasury to have outstanding at any time $25,000,000,000 in long-term bonds and $20,000,000,000 in short-term issues.

The measure is a logical accompaniment of proposals indorsed by the Administration, which call for large outlays and will later necessitate an appeal to Congress for additional funds, unless prior authorization to borrow is given. At present, the Treasury, empowered to issue up to $28,000,000,000 of bonds, has issued all but $2,500,000,000 of that total, although, as a result of redemptions, the volume of bonds actually outstanding is only $13,475,000,000. Consequently the Doughton proposal would permit of an expansion of about $11,500,000,000 in bond issues.

The borrowing powers asked to facilitate placement of sort-term loans are not intended, however, to bring about an expansion of such offerings but to allow for greater flexibility in shifting from one to another type of issue. Thus, the $10,000,000,000 limit to the amount of notes that may be outstanding at any time has almost been reached, whereas the volume of short-term Treasury bills and certificates of indebtedness is far below the maximum figure allowed—also $10,000,000,000. As it is the desire of the Treasury to reduce the volume of bills and certificates, replacing them by notes of longer maturity when possible, it has asked for permission to borrow up to $20,000,000,000 at short term, without differentiating betweeen the classes of securities. There is also a plan to sell savings bonds on a discount basis which, while unique, is not likely to make much impression upon the market for Government bonds or to cover any substantial proportion of the borrowing needs of the Government.

The attempt of the Administration to emancipate itself from dependence upon Congress for continuing grants of funds to finance its spending program is interpreted in some quarters as an indication that orthodox financial methods will be followed in financing the deficit, and that strenuous efforts will be made to convert short-term debt into long-term issues. This is a very superficial indication of financial orthodoxy. If the spending program is to be carried on indefinitely under blanket authorization to add to the amount of the public debt, intentions, however good, will not save the country from the evil effects of inflation.

It is to be hoped, therefore, that the borrowing maximum set by the Treasury will not be viewed indulgently, merely because it appears to oppose printing-press methods of financing a deficit. Indeed it is a grave question whether Congress ought to authorize any such expansion of spending power, even though it retains the power to prevent its full utilization by refusal to vote appropriations that would bring our national debt up to the maximum figure of $45,000,000,000 requested.

Reserve Bank Directors.

Since the Federal Reserve Board has recently reappointed for the period of a year Federal Reserve Agents and other Class C directors whose terms expired on December 31, its announcement of a new appointment policy at this particular time has come somewhat as a surprise. The reasons for its rather premature statement of intention to limit the terms of service of Class C Federal Reserve Bank directors are not given, and as a result conjecture is rife.

Viewed solely on its merits, however, the board's decision not to reappoint directors who have served more than six years, with the exception of the chairman of the board, who is also the Federal Reserve Agent, is a desirable change of policy. It does not, of course, affect the tenure of office of Class A and B directors, not subject to board appointment, but the action taken may set an example which will be followed in the selection of these other directors.

General acceptance of the principle of limited service has much to commend it. As stated by the Federal Reserve Board in its explanatory letter, the value of experience gained from participation in the direction of management can be overstressed. The board proposes to apply a similar policy of limited tenure to directors of Federal Reserve branch banks. It emphasizes, too, the desirability of selecting men engaged in agriculture, industry and commerce to serve locally.

Effective cooperation between the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Reserve banks, often conspicuously lacking, would unquestionably be furthered by a change in policy such as that contemplated. It would, in the opinion of the board, "avoid the possibility of crystallization of control of their managements by particular individuals or groups through long continuance in power."

Whether the new policy will make for more efficient and better coordinated operations depends, however, upon the character of the men who are responsible for the conduct of policy, and the objectives at which they are aiming.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Local "Black Widows."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Department of Agriculture says a few black widow spiders may be found around Washington. I wonder if any Post readers have seen any in Washington?

Yesterday morning (January 21) Mrs. Mullen killed one in our living room, not two yards from the baby as she lay in her carriage.

I saw it just before it was killed. It was crawling sluggishly along a radio wire that lay on the floor. Apparently it had come up from the cellar through a hole in the floor through which our radio ground wire runs. Needless to say, all holes in our floor are now plugged.

Upon investigating the cellar, I found two spider eggs, but did not know if either was a black widow's egg. I smashed them just to be certain. An amateur naturalist, I was certain about the spider. It was somewhat over a half inch in diameter, shiny black, with the red hour glass warning sign on it.

I hope you will publish this letter immediately, so that readers of The Post can be on their guard in case this vicious pest invades their cellars or homes.

Efficient Police Work.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I take this means to compliment the officers who responded to the call at 419 M street northwest about 10 o'clock on the evening of January 10, when I was held up by four thugs, who attempted to rob me, and left my face terribly battered up. The officers were there within five minutes after the No. 2 Station had been telephoned.

The new system of police patrol by means of telephones and scout cars is a fine modern system of getting police protection in time of extreme emergency and awful danger. Under this system the police can reach the place of crime within a few minutes, and thus cope with the situation.

The Doomed Elm.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: American elm saplings have recently been set out in front of the Navy and Munition Buildings on Constitution avenue. The planting of them is ironical to those who know that these very saplings are doomed unless the same Government that planted them takes quick steps to save them from a blight as powerful and swift as the well-known chestnut blight of recent years.

The elm is considered by many as the unofficial national tree of this country, and because of the blindness of the American people and its leaders, this tree is destined to arch dead limbs over city streets, suburban roads, and country fields. The white ghosts of the chestnut trees are dead appeals to the public to save our living elms.

The disaster that is threatening the elms is the Dutch elm disease. Incipient in this country for years, all efforts to control it have been of no avail and the state of affairs is so critical that unless drastic control measures are taken before next spring all of our elms must die.

The present Administration is one of the most tree-minded that we have ever had, for it has appropriated enormous sums for reforestation and conservation, but would it not be more profitable to use some of the reforestation money to save the trees we already have?

Billions Out Of Nothing.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post has abundantly ridiculed the Townsend plan of old-age pensions, but you have been very shy on facts showing why it will not work. I wish real information, without bias.

As I see it, the plan would require $24,000,000,000 per year out of a total national revenue of $80,000,000,000 per year, or about one-third of the total income.

But, as I also see it, each monthly payment must be spent within the succeeding month. Hence at the end of the year eleven-twelfths of the total for the year would be back in circulation and only one-twelfth of the amount tied up. =1-12 of 1-3 =1-36 of national income tied up and 11-12X1-3=11-36 would be back in circulation. This looks like good business to me. SUBSCRIBER.

The Life Of Transients.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to thank you for the write-up given us in your January 22 issue of The Post by Robert Knight in regard to the life of transients as he found it at the Frederick Transient Center in Frederick, Md. I appreciate fully the interesting manner in which he has presented this matter and believe that such write-ups will be a great help to all who are concerned in working out the problems of relief at this time. GEORGE B. FOUT,

Meet The Prince.

As a New Year's remembrance, his royal father conferred a few more resounding titles upon Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David, His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales. The Prince now has risen in the world to be: Admiral of the Fleet, General of the Army and Chief Marshal of the Air Force. He already had a sizable collection of titles: Earl of Chester, Duke of Cornwell, Duke of Rothesay, Earl of Carrick, Baron Renfrew, Lord of the Isles, Great Steward of Scotland, High Steward of Windsor.

And that isn't the half of it. As the initials he is entitled to write behind his name signify, he is also Knight of the Garter, Member of the Privy Council, Knight of the Order of the Thistle, Knight of the Order of St. Patrick, Grand Commander Star of India, Grand Master of the Order of St. Michael and St. George and holder of several more orders. Nor is that all. He is also personal A. D. C. to the King, Colonel of the Welsh Guards, Colonel in Chief of the Twelfth Lancers, Middlesex Regiment, Royal Scots Fusiliers, Royal Wiltshire Yeomanry and other snappy military outfits.

He has an assortment of other titles, too, but reciting them, we fear, would be a weariness to the flesh. Suffice it that there is a redeeming feature: H. R. H. is known to his intimates as Dave.

For And Against The World Court.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Inasmuch as both the Democratic and Republican parties have declared themselves in their platforms in favor of entering the World Court, as favorable action on the World Court has been recommended by four Presidents, as the question of this country joining the World Court has been before the American people for the past 12 or 13 years, and the subject has been debated in the Senate for a number of years, there is no good or sufficient reason for further delaying action.

The United States' interests are safely guarded and we have nothing to lose and everything to gain by joining the World Court at the earliest possible moment. We have to join in order to protect our interests abroad.

President Roosevelt put the whole question in a nutshell when he said in his recent brief message to Congress: "The sovereignty of the United States will be in no way diminished or jeopardized by such action."

Believing that President Roosevelt has the best interest of all the people of this Nation at heart, and that he is doing his best to advance the welfare of all the people, I am of the opinion the country will make no mistake by following this advice and by joining the World Court as soon as possible.

S. MAGRUDER SIMPSON.
Washington, Jan. 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now comes the hackneyed World Court again to take its place beside the Canadian Treaty for reconsideration. Mr. Roosevelt's predecessors had different conditions to deal with—an apparently prosperous and friendly world. Today we have a world financially and politically disordered and actually unfriendly. The attitude is wholly different.

Everyone knows these European enmities have prevailed since the fall of the Western Roman Empire, especially those existing between the Germans and the French. They are racial and permanent, and the nations of Europe have evinced no inclination to remove them. Why, then, should we become entangled in them? When will we learn international discretion? Or must we continue unsophisticated dupes drawing the chestnuts of others from the fire?

Whatever might have been feasible immediately following the war, certainly nothing is to be gained now, either materially or morally, by going into this entangling sport. Let us keep clear of this seething cauldron of European international hatred. Let that continent settle its own problems in its own way. After all, we are only needed to finance the next war. We have enough to do to build the prosperity and friendship of our own continent. Are we somehow duty-bound to cure the ills of all the rest of the world when we don't seem able to cure our own? E. P. LOWE.

The Post Impressionist

As Mencken Sees Red.

Post Office, Thursday.

FOR a long time it's been a long way from Mencken to the "Mercury." Now Mr. Mencken has lengthened it.

When the Baltimore sage edited the New York magazine, Manhattan's commuting Communists regarded "The American Mercury," if not as a party organ, at least as a megaphone more than occasionally open to them.

And they were grateful to H. L. M. They paid him the full praise.

Then Mencken retired from the editorial chair. The magazine remained as broad-minded as ever. But Mencken, they said, didn't. They said he became conservative.

Well, today they must be crying that he has become reactionary.

For he has written a piece for "Liberty"—of all magazines. And in it he says—of all things—that the American Communist leaders are hornswogglers and that their followers are hornswoggled.

He won't grant so much as courage to what he calls our "Communist big shots." They choose, says he, "their battlegrounds very carefully, and keep away from those that look really dangerous."

On what does this, their Mencken, feed? "Nearly all these master minds," he declares, "are men who have tried other short-cuts to the limelight and fallen by the wayside . . . There are shabby authors who tried to make the good magazines, and now howl that all competent and decent writers are subsidized by Wall Street. There are former professors of a dozen bogus sciences."

Not even the fighting rank and file can tap the deep wells of Menckenian pity. Among them he finds only "shrieking women with Freudian complexes . . . young college boys eager to annoy their fathers . . . miscellaneous morons."

But it must be that fling at the Party's literary members which most deeply wounds certain "Mercury" contributors.

"Back in 1931," says Mr. Mencken, "it was announced that the American literati were flocking to the Red Banner in large numbers, and that proletarian literature of great loveliness and high horsepower was about to enchant the country and bring on the revolution. But when this proletarian literature began to get into print it turned out to be simply drivel in bad English with a banal admixture of schoolboy obscenity. Not three American authors of any professional dignity, however slight, have ever joined the Communist Party. It hasn't even produced a tolerable journalist."

Mr. Mencken believes that the party's membership is negligible and flatly declares that its much-bruited propaganda among the colored people is a flop.

Why?

Because, in the great Baltimore liberal's opinion, the Negro "has a makeweight for his troubles in a very active sense of humor . . . He listened politely (to his Communist persuaders), went to a few of their dances, jiggled solemnly with the emetic white women in waiting, and then returned home to laugh."

He doesn't, according to the maker of the "Mercury," want any more of the party's help:

"A number of times during the past few years Communist organizations have made noisy efforts, usually unsolicited, to rescue this or that dark brother from the wolves of capitalism in the South—and on every occasion the clearing away of the smoke has revealed the Communists safe above the Potomac and the dark brothers in the death-houses below it."

And, finally, Mr. Mencken is of opinion that the Communist Party in Russia has reached his own conclusion about the Communist Party in America. The former, he avers, has found the latter a menace to the Soviet Republics' relations with the New Deal Republic—and, inferentially, still more of an expensive nuisance than a political menace. Accordingly, the Russian party, he feels sure, has sold the American party "down the river"—until, the metaphor changing and carrying the river to the sea, "the American comrades are left standing on a burning deck with no Coast Guard cutter in sight."

All this we quote not because we agree with Mr. Mencken: we couldn't—entirely. We quote it because he is still, more or less, Mr. Mecken and because the "Mercury" is still, less or more, the "Mercury," even if, on Tuesday, it did change owners for the first time and editors for at least the third.

We quoted the "Mercury" when one of its contributors said Peary didn't discover the Pole—when another said Rennenkampf won Tannenberg. And if we quote Mr. Mencken now, we shall none the less be tolerant of the "Mercury" should a member of the Communist literati painstakingly endeavor there to lift against him a verbal shillalah "of great loveliness and high horsepower."

No More Anxieties In Polk County, Iowa

Bemused By Townsend Plan, 31,000 Of Its Residents Petition For The More Abundant Life.

By Hilding Siversen
(Special Correspondence of The Post.)

Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 23.

WHEN Representative Hubert Utterback, of Des Moines, flushed with victory over the veteran Cassius Dowell, packed his suitcase for Washington to take part in the exhilarating projects of the New Deal, he included a bulky package given him by a considerable number of his constituents as a Christmas present.

It was a petition of 31,000 residents of his own Polk County, urging him to support the Townsend plan of old age pensions—that mystic formula whereby life begins at 60.

For a reason mentioned later, there is something poignantly reminiscent in the fact that Dr. Townsend lives at Long Beach, sometimes called "Little Iowa." However there is no reason to suppose that petition-signers for the Townsend plan are more numerous in Iowa than in the East, South or West. Support of this glamorous fantasy is pathetic for its blind faith in an impossible design, coming not only from the aged and helpless, but from younger people who anticipate a golden senility; not only from Dubuque but from Hoboken and Mobile.

• • • •

FOR 50 years people from the Mid-West, particularly from Iowa, have seen visions of a tranquil old age under the palms and pepper trees of the Los Angeles or Miami country. Those with means have realized the dream—many of them. Now, with the prospect of an income of $200 a month for each person over 60, literally millions are building air-castles in Long Beach, Venice, Beverly Hills, Santa Monica, Coral Gables. A typical instance is that of an elderly Iowa woman who recently told a housemaid, now regularly employed: "Mary, when they start the pension, I'm going straight to California and take you with me as my personal maid." Score two more votes for Townsend.

The net result of such a psychology, of course, would be an unprecedented stampede to a few of the balmier States, where all the money would be spent, draining all the other States of population as well as of tax-money wherewith to pay the pension. Iowa is not used because it is exceptional, but because it is typical.

No wonder Long Beach is "practically unanimous" for the Townsend plan, as reported. Any formula that would provide several million people with a steady income of $200 a month would be soup and nuts, roast turkey and brown gravy, for any community of the balmy climate.

The mystic zeal of the believers in this formula is gently, wistfully feverish akin to that of Amen-shouting Methodist revivals of another day. There is a blind faith that somehow the money for such a beneficent adventure may be plucked out of thin air, in even greater amounts than was provided by the incredible and historic Santa Claus of 1934.

• • • •

The John Smith family, let us call it, is headed by a fine old gentleman of 87. He has a son Joseph, 60 years old and a daughter Jane, 62. Each is married to persons of approximately equal age. This makes five potential pensioners. Other sons and daughters, four in number, range in age from 35 to 55. All of them are having a rather tough time except Brother Jotham, aged 43, who is a shrewd, hard-working, successful business man with an income of $800 a month.

If, when and as the Townsend plan goes into effect, what will happen?

The daughters Mary and Edith and the son James, who are having a hard time, with scanty incomes from insurance selling, farming, garage-tending, will gather in clubby manner about the five pensioners and tactfully and casually mention their difficulties.

"Whoops, my dears!" the five pensioners will exclaim in unison. "Why worry? We have $1,000 a month. Imagine that! We'll just fill our houses with groceries, coal and clothing, and when we're looking the other way, just come in and help yourselves. And if there's anything left that we don't need, bring a neighbor or two. We don't want to be selfish."

Mary, Edith and James will do this, with right good will. They will lose interest in the selling of insurance, farming and garage-tending.

But how about Jotham, the successful business man?

Oh, we had nearly forgotten about him. He will pay the taxes. He will be taxed so heavily, in fact, that he, too, will soon say, "What's the use? I'm not being rewarded for being industrious, thrifty, ambitious, careful, well-trained. On the contrary, I'm being penalized for it—and how!"

Very logically, therefore, he will decide that the Government doesn't want him to be ambitious and work hard, but prefers to have him idle and live off the old folks. So he will close the old business and start sponging off the $1,000-a-month communal money-pot of magic. And when he's 60, he, too, will get $200 a month and not be compelled to live off a mere $100-a-month or such a matter from the ancestral family treasury.

• • • •

IT is hard to conceive of anybody deliberately planning to pauperize a nation, but no more certain or efficient formula has ever been devised than this. It is a two-edged sword aimed at sturdy self-reliance and industry, providing a means whereby persons of young or middle age could secure subsistence without working for it, by living off their 60-year-old parents, relatives or friends, the system thereby removing incentive and encouraging idleness; at the same time placing an impossibly heavy penalty on earning power by taxing workers within an inch of their lives. Under such a destructive regime even the most high-minded and industrious must crumple up and abandon the grotesquely unequal struggle.

The fact that 31,000 persons in a single county could support such a monstrous and grotesque project, and that the ratio probably extends throughout the United States, is a cause for some alarm. It is also a cause for pessimism as to the future of self-government.

Some observers comfort themselves, however, by the thought that the Townsend plan could not have gotten anywhere in normal times. Indirectly it may be one of the results of the psychological implications of the New Deal, whose "economic security" formula and rejection of rugged individualism in toto has been somewhat misinterpreted by eager theorists. The New Deal philosophy has unwittingly fertilized the ground for the Townsend harvest.

• • • •

THAT the Townsend plan is not a flimsy, passing will-o'-the-wisp, to be dismissed by commentators, is evidenced by the fervor of mass meetings, by letters to such newspapers as the Des Moines Register, and by personal discussions which are plentiful in every community.

This much is certain: The Townsend plan propaganda, which has spread like a prairie fire, has already made it very necessary for the Administration to start a back-fire in the form of a more moderate old-age pension plan. And it is not yet certain that the back-fire will be stronger than the original big blaze, which started in Long Beach, and which has swept across the continent and is now threatening to leap the Potomac.

The Fisherman Who Forgot.

("St. Pierre, Miquelon.—After fourteen years of living off American prohibition, the fishermen of St. Pierre have forgotten how to fish and many of them are now on the dole."—News item.)

"Now, Francois, try to remember! . . . Think hard now . . . You know what fish are, don't you? . . . Squirmy things with big round eyes . . . What? . . . Do they come in gunny-sacks? . . . Certainly not!

• • • •

"And not in tin containers, either . . . Just let your mind go back and see if you can't recollect how fishing is done . . . You go out in a boat and throw over a net . . . You know what a net is . . . What? . . . It's what's left after taking expenses from the gross! . . . No! No! . . . This is a fishing net . . . It's full of holes like—what shall I say? —like those old prohibition laws!

• • • •

"That refreshed your recollection, of course . . . Well, now see if you can't remember what you do with this net . . . You do what? . . . You cut it . . . Certainly not . . . You got so used to cutting things in the rum-running business that you can't think of anything else . . . But you don't cut fishing nets . . . Huh? . . . Yes, you use 'em straight!

• • • •

"Now let's get on . . . You go out in a boat as far as deep water and then what? . . . Try to remember . . . What? . . . No, you don't fire a gun!

• • • •

"Yes, I realize you used to fire a gun pretty often during your work for the last ten years, but no guns are fired while fishing! . . . What's that? . . . How about the Coast Guard? . . . They won't bother you if you're after fish!

• • • •

"Now then you've got your nets over. . . . What do you do next? . . . Wait for radio instructions? . . .

No! . . . You haul in the nets and dump the contents into the well of the ship. . . . No, you don't have to be afraid of breakage! . . . You want to know what? . . . What's in the nets? . . . Fish, of course! No, I didn't say fifths . . . I said fish!

• • • •

"Huh? . . . Do you dilute 'em? . . . Well, I guess we'd better skip it, Francois. . . . Forget all about fishing. . . . The subject was opened by mistake. . . . You go back and stay on the dole like a good boy!"

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

Canary Swallowers

AS Gen. Johnson's articles in the Saturday Evening Post begin to warm up it would appear that Donald Richberg was not the only one who should be worried. There are revelations which might well give concern to all the apostles of the new order.

BARGERON.

The substance of the creed of bureaucracy and centralization is that our New Dealers are not ordinary men, that they aren't subject to the petty emotions, the hates, bitterness, vanities, jealousies and weaknesses which the rest of us mortals experience. They are supermen. It would have admittedly been dangerous to give the Republicans or any other set of men the power which the New Dealers demand. Being only human they would have abused it or there would have been limitations to their ability.

But not the New Dealers. They are different. They are too much engrossed in the great vision which they have for the country to be swayed by the little influences which play so important a part in the lives of the rest of us.

• • • •

The governors of our States are weak, also the State legislatures, our Representatives and Senators and State regulatory agencies. They are mere men all, and circumscribed by life's myriad influences. The only thing to do then is to give dictatorial authority to the men here, men who are above all the weaknesses of mankind.

Deny them this contention and they haven't a leg to stand on. Their whole theory of governing falls with a bang.

Yet we find the general revealing unwittingly that he, after all, was no superman, that there in the last days of his administration he was consumed with an intensity of feeling against a subordinate, Mr. Richberg, whom he thought was doing him wrong.

Reading his latest article, one can't escape the conclusion that the general could not have at this time been thinking solely and unselfishly of the body weal. What apparently was uppermost in his mind was what Donald was doing to him.

• • • •

But this quite usual trait of mortal man was not confined to the general. He tells of going one day to the White House for a conference and when he walked in, either the President's room or the Cabinet room, he found two of his New Deal associates looking at him as if they had "swallowed a canary."

It would be rather interesting to know just what particular conference this was and to check back in the files to see how the newspapers reported it. They said nothing about two New Dealers looking at the general as if they had swallowed a canary.

It was undoubtedly another of those momentous meetings at which the reporters hang breathlessly on the outside in an effort to acquaint the country with the momentous discussions that took place. It comes as a severe shock to learn this meeting had to do with two men looking at the general as if they had swallowed a canary.

• • • •

Well, it is just disillusioning, that's all. Only ordinary men take on the swallowed-canary look toward fellow men. We didn't think men who seek such authority as is being sought in the pending $4,000,000,000 building program, who scheme to bring all of the reserve banks under their thumbs, would ever have the very human frailty of swallowing canaries over their associates.

But the statement of the general confronts us. Right at a crucial time in our history two of the general's associates were so far from the common weal as to be swallowing a canary for his discomfiture.

And the fact is, of course, that it has been a long time since we have had an administration with so many canary swallowers. They are as thick as the starlings.

Ex-Transient Steward Convicted in 'Dope' Case

A jury in the District Supreme Court yesterday found Herbert I. Burke, former Transient Bureau steward, guilty of violating the Harrison narcotic act.

Lillian Carmardo, arrested in December in the national round-up of alleged "dope" peddlers, pleaded guilty. She was released on bond of $1,500 pending investigation by probation officers.

No End Of Books

'The College Omnibus' Holds A Sure Antidote For Biliousness Caused By Sweet Reading.

By Theodore Hall.

SOMETIMES, with an omnivorous, habitual momentum, I get to reading something without caring much what it is so long as I am reading. Thus, the other night, I started through a magazine which lay at hand. It would be bad manners, to say the least, to mention its name, for I'm going to speak plainly.

But it was a woman's magazine, sleek, sensuous, successful. While I was reading it in simple trustfulness, suddenly—pouf!—and my tolerance went up in thin air. And the further I read, the less well I felt. Then that state of distemper had a fascination of its own, and I kept on just to see how much I could stand.

You know the sort of thing, of course—the slushy fudge stories of electroplated people, the cake-frosting style of illustrations, the total cloying intent of setting up a world which is nine parts French pastry and one part essence of guff. In several dozen expensively printed pages there was not a handful of honestly palatable items. It was all specious self-flattery, Blind Man's Buff played with an artificial silk handkerchief, high polished and elegant apple filled with Dead Sea ash—!

But excuse me—I've got other things to do than to imply one personal indigestion.

• • • •

Robert Haven Schauffler once gathered an anthology called "The Poetry Cure." Ingeniously, he found certain poems (as well as music and pictures) to offset such ills as spleen, melancholy, and low blood pressure. To recite such a poem as Chesterton's "Lepanto" aloud, for example, is to tone up your constitution for a week.

And as a compound cure for the sour stomach, biliousness, and broken arches of trust caused by the above mishap into saccharinity—which might befall any reader any time, these days—let me recommend James Dow McCallum's 982-page collection of sound and tonic literature entitled "The College Omnibus" (Harcourt Brace, $3.75). Between the lines, now, you must read my before-and-after testimonial.

• • • •

Last year the book came out, strictly speaking, for college use. This year Prof. McCallum, who teaches English at Dartmouth, has enlarged it—mirabile visu!—and the publishers have served it up nicely for the general reader. In the welter of tentative writing which the presses fling out on the contemporary table, a volume of dependable excellences like the one in hand is as nourishing as good roast beef. Put at its flattest, "The College Omnibus" holds a raft of good reading you may have missed.

Here, first of all, is the complete text of Lytton Strachey's "Queen Victoria," as poised and integrated a biography as has ever been written. There follow 25 essays—Lamb and Hazlitt; Virginia Woolf and Christopher Morley on reading and talking; a selection on college life; another on our times (Stuart Chase, Gilbert Seldes, and Paul de Kruif, for examples); and another on the New Deal. By no means, you see, is this anthology stuck in the classics. If it takes a modern writer to catch a modern megrim, we find him here in full voice.

Then come the whole of Thomas Hardy's novel, "The Mayor of Casterbridge," and the whole of Mark Twain's novelette, "The Man That Corrupted Hadleyburg." Prof. McCallum may not have included them as specific purges for the sweety-sweety, but that's what they are.

Among the 15 short stories, "The Fall of the House of Usher" and "The Outcasts of Poker Flat" alone are tinsel. The rest—from Conrad and Mansfield to Dana Burnet and George Milburn—have honesty and force. Even when we come to three plays by Synge, O'Neill and Galsworthy, we're not yet done with this capacious volume.

Ninety pages of Keats, Tennyson and Browning show a cyclical return of taste. And 50 page of later poets, from Hardy to Wylie and Millay, will refresh anyone who hasn't gone off the deep end into the doggerel of modernistic verse.

• • • •

But listing, even of so rich and ample an anthology, is tedious. You had best go wandering through "The College Omnibus" yourself, finding gratefully—I assure you it's there—the primary discrimination of values which makes the difference between literature and soft soap.

And if you've been hapless enough to "indulge to excess," as the ads say, in the latter, reach up on the shelf and pour yourself a long draft from this book. It's better than sulphur and molasses in the spring.

Hilton Discovered

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

AMONG all the popular new novels of 1934, "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," was the most popular; its sales exceeded 100,000, and I am glad of it.

The author, the young Englishman, James Hilton, had written some other novels, which at the time of publication attracted no attention; but the popularity of Mr. Chips kept the various publishers busy getting out new editions of them.

• • • •

I supposed I had found them all after I had read six, but a friend of mine discovered in the library of Milford, Conn., a novel by James Hilton which had been published in 1924, when the author was 24 years old; it was called "The Passionate Year." I had never heard any one mention it, and it had only been drawn out from the library a few times in the entire decade.

Thus the list of published novels by this author is seven, and it shows that he was entirely undiscouraged by their lack of success, but kept on writing, until in the year 1934 he made an enormous and well-merited success with "Goodbye, Mr. Chips."

• • • •

"The Passionate Year" is also a story of a boys' school, and the hero is a young teacher, fresh from Cambridge University. It is an exciting yarn, and I read it with unflagging interest. The life at a school in England, among the pupils and among the teachers, seems to be faithfully portrayed; but when women appear upon the scene, the Head Master's yellow-haired daughter and her girl friend, cheerfulness rises to ecstasy, and then falls into the very depths of tragedy. It is a heartbreaking tragedy, written with candor and sincerity. There is abundant evidence of the skill of the born novelist. I am now going to discover definitely in what order Mr. Hilton's seven novels were written; but until I succeed in this attempt, there is no harm in guessing, and my conjecture is that the order of composition was as follows:

"The Passionate Year."
"Rage in Heaven."
"Ill Wind."
"Without Armour."
"And Now Goodbye."
"Lost Horizon."
"Goodbye, Mr. Chips."

Polish Institute Hears Address By Mrs. Kellogg

Many Washington Officials Present at Talk on Mme. Curie.

New York, Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Before a distinguished audience of scientists and laymen at the Polish Institute of Arts and Letters, Mrs. Vernon Kellogg, of Washington, delivered an address this evening based upon her personal recollections of Mme. Marie Sklodowska Curie, famous scientist, whom she had known personally over a period of 15 years. Among the Washington patrons of this memorial meeting were the Polish Ambassador, Stanislaw Patek, Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss.

"Most people's memory picture of Marie Curie," Mrs. Kellogg said, "is of a little woman in a leaky shed, before a cauldron, with a heavy bar, stirring, watching, the world shut out.

"But I see her in the institute laboratory, searching still the unknown, but with students from Japan, Norway, from across the world, about her, sharing her discoveries, sharing the American radium gift, and sharing the dreams still only in her mind.

Mme. Curie Ambitious.

"Marie Curie always looked beyond the conquest of truth to its use to enlarge the social vision. As a girl, she almost decided to specialize in social science instead of in physics. Early her hopes focussed on an ever-broadening human brotherhood.

"This made her, with her husband, renounce personal gain and give radium to the world. This made her equip a war hospital ambulance with X-ray apparatus and operate it along the front. This made her serve on the League of Nations' committee on intellectual cooperation. I watched the work of that committee, for my husband served on it, and I saw no one who so intensely practiced what it pled for as did Mme. Curie. This made her plan and see through, the Radium Institute of Warsaw, made her dream of others dotting the earth."

Mrs. Kellogg devoted much of her talk to personal reminiscences of the famous scientist. Much of the address was based on notes in Mrs. Kellogg's diary made at a time when she was most intimately acquainted wtih the discoverer of radium.

Philosophy of Education.

Mrs. Kellogg said that Mme. Curie's philosophy of education for her daughters was based on a remark she once maid. "I believe that kindness goes farther than severity. And yet because I believe in encouraging each individual's bent, nad have never harnessed my girls in the traditional curriculum, here I have a daughter who instead of accompanying me to the laboratory, exhibits a strange necessity to possess a black cat and to practice 6 and 8 hours a day on a piano! I wonder about my education theories!"

Fish Is Made Member Of Capital Lions Club

Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, and Machael F. Keough, Washington attorney, were inducted into membership in the Lions Club at a meeting in the Mayflower Hotel yesterday.

Representative Fish will be the principal speaker at a meeting January 30 to which clubs of Maryland and Delaware have been invited.

Gold Case Wranglers Differ Over Dollars

One Side Looks To Face Of Gold Contracts While Other Weighs Buying Power.

By Elliott Thurston.

UNENDING wrangling over the gold cases pending before the Supreme Court turns largely upon conflicting conceptions of the dollar. The rival attitudes relate more to the moralities than to the legalities of the New Deal's erasure of gold clauses, past and prospective.

One school calls the action repudiation and confiscation. This school accuses the Government of going back on its own promises to pay and of forcing repudiation of private as well as public promises. The other school, holding with the Government, insists that there has been no repudiation or, at least, no confiscation—that the holders of promises to pay in gold are being deprived of nothing because the devalued dollars they are getting back in lieu of gold will buy more than the dollars they originally loaned.

Some confusion appears to have arisen, judging from much public discussion, because it is assumed that in the cases now pending before the court the issue raised is whether the makers of promises to pay in gold are to be held strictly to the terms of the promise. The fact is that none of the petitioners asks for gold. In the pending cases, the petitioners ask not for gold but for an "equivalent" of gold.

THAT is, they do not challenge the right or power of the Government to refuse or prevent payment of gold itself, but they ask for dollars equal to the new price of gold set when the New Deal devalued the dollar down to 59.06 per cent of its former gold parity. In other words, those who have brought their cases to the highest court ask the court to rule, in effect, that they shall be paid at the rate of $1.69 for each $1, face value, of the promises to pay gold.

This, of coure, means that if the court so rules, the Government, States, cities, corporations and other makers of promises to pay in gold would stand to pay $169,000,000,000 instead of $100,000,000,000 aggregate face value, in dollars, of their promises. Hence, the talk about "chaos," for clearly a chaotic state of affairs would result unless other means were found, as they undoubtedly would be, to prevent such an enormous addition to the public and private debts.

However, the basic difference of viewpoint appears to arise from the fact that one school is thinking of dollars as dollars while the other school is thinking of the dollar in terms of what it will buy. The former say that the Government, for example, put in its Liberty bonds a solemn promise to pay either gold or else a number of dollars equivalent to the gold. Thus, they hold that an amount should now be paid in dollars equivalent to the new dollar value of gold—or, precisely, $16,931.25 for every $10,000 gold bond.

THE latter school—the Government and other makers of gold promises—argue that to pay this amount would be to give to the bondholder a buying power vastly in excess of the buying power of the dollars they originally loaned. Whatever the shortcomings of price indexes, it is generally conceded that the present, devalued dollar is still worth much more measured by what it will buy than it was at the time the Liberty bonds were floated, or when most of the corperate and other outstanding gold bonds were issued.

The government position is that the dollar should be measured by what it will buy—that the dollar by itself is worth nothing, that it is only valuable because the Government has stamped it as a medium of exchange. Hence, the Government view is that the bondholders should be satisfied—since they do not demand gold itself—to get back dollars that will buy more today than when loaned. To get back $1.69, so the Government holds, is to get a "windfall," actually a very big profit.

It is evident that men are bound to be hopelessly divided according to whether their economics and morals dispose them to take one view of the dollar or the other. Those who say that a promise to pay gold is a promise to pay dollars equal to the new price of gold, are sure to see the New Deal's action as repudiation and confiscation. Those who say, as the Government does, that what the dollar will buy is vital, that the devalued dollar is still greater in buying power than the dollars originally loaned by the bondholders, are certain to accuse the other side of seeking "to enrich themselves," unduly, as the Attorney General's brief puts it.

• • • •

ACCORDINGLY, in the recent arguments before the court, one side charged, specifically, that they were being deprived of what on the face of their bonds they were clearly entitled to receive. The other side, the Government, retorted, in effect, that no real loss could be shown, no deprivation, no denial of food, clothing or other tangible property.

Much of the current debate divides according to the differing basic conceptions—one measuring the dollar in terms of explicit promises to pay in gold, the other measuring the dollar in terms of buying power. These views are in the realm of economics, or policy, or morals, rather than necessarily within the purview of the law and the Constitution.

However, they serve to illustrate why one side talks of bad faith, repudiation and confiscation while the other as warmly denies all of these anything but soft impeachments.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Joint recital by Lea Luboschutz, violinist, and Robert Casadesus, pianist, in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom Wednesday morning; Pierre Luboschutz, accompanist. Program: for violin—Adagio and Fugue (Bach), Rondo Capriccioso (Saint-Saens), Scherzo (Prokofiev), "Alt Wien" (Godovski), Tarantella (Szymanovski); for piano—Sonatos Nos. 263 and 463 (Domenico Scarlatti), Etudes Nos. 5 and 11 Op. 25, Scherzo Op. 39 (Chopin), "Reflects dans l'eau" (Debussy), Spanish Dance No. 10 (Granados), Toccata (Ravel).

Not often does a concert stage present so marked a contrast as that between the almost subjective calm of Lea Luboschutz and the objective activity of Robert Casadesus. The creative impulse at the basis of artistry counsels the one to restrain movement to a minimum, and compels the others to expend every ounce of muscular energy. In this instance, the same effect of mastery is produced by both methods, because each of these executants is a thorough musician in technique and temperament.

Bach Precisely Accented.

The outward placidity of Mme. Luboshutz is no criterion by which to judge her emotional capacity, although an advantage in her reading of the Bach music, precisely accented in every phase and bowed with a lovely serenity of tone. Her brilliant performance of the Saint-Saens rondo, on the other hand, was far from being empty scintillance; it was suffused with warmth, delicately colored and vitalized in every measure.

Versatility in interpretation and virtuosity in execution were manifested in the sentiment of Godovski's "Alt Wien," in the wit of Prokofiev's impudently sarcastic scherzo, and in the intricate difficulties of the Szymanovski tarantella. In all that she played, her admirable poise dominated, but did not suppress, her artistic finesse and her poetic instinct.

It was a pleasure to hear for the first time the accomplished French musician, Robert Casadesus, who combines tremendous dynamic power with delicacies of touch. When he marches to a pianistic climax, he has the tread of a giant, but he is careful never to crush in his stride the flowers of tonal beauty. He is a master both of bravura sonority and of pastel softness, and his touch is as variant as the moods he expresses.

Pronounced Individuality.

While he is not in the least what one would call a cerebral player, his readings are alertly intelligent and the utterance of a pronounced individuality. That he has a keen sense of style was evident in his discriminating treatment of the composers whose works he displayed. The Scarlatti sonatas were kept at their right distance from the romanticism of Chopin and the impressionism of Debussy.

Equipped with a prodigious technique, he uses it in the interests of interpretation. Because of his overflowing vitality, there is not a dull moment in his playing, and one's attention is continually caught by significant inflections. His command of tonal color is complete from resonant red to the palest tint of blue, and he can blend them, when he chooses, in a shimmering fabric.

Ann Harding Plans China Trip, Leavin Daughter in School

Hollywood, Jan. 23 (AP).—Suddenly deciding to leave behind her 6-year-old daughter, who has become the focus of a bitter legal wrangle, Ann Harding, stately blonde screen actress, packed her trunks tonight for a trip to China to recuperate from an illness that has kept her away from the cameras since last autumn.

Coincidental with announcement that she was starting for the Orient, Miss Harding replied tartly to charges of her divorced husband, Harry Bannister, actor and writer, that she was "not a fit person" to have complete custody of their child, Jane. Through her attorney she said:

"I can only say that the decree of the Nevada court in the early part of this month awarding to me the sole custody and control of my daughter after a full hearing, and at which hearing Mr. Bannister had every opportunity to be heard, is complete refutation of any charges in the action and a determination that there is no basis for them."

Jane, the healthy little girl who lives with Miss Harding in a mountain mansion where vigilance against possible kidnapers is never relaxed, will continue her school work with tutors while her mother rests aboard a Pacific Ocean liner.

Miss Harding has been suffering from "dehydration"—evaporation of water from the body because of the strong movie lights.

Birthday Ball Tuesday By Young Democrats

Washington's children crippled by infantile paralysis will be benefitted by the proceeds of the Young Democrat's birthday ball for the President at the Mayflower Hotel Tuesday night, as well as from the official birthday ball at the Shoreham Hotel Wednesday night.

Both ball committees, it was said, are working in cooperation, and the funds obtained from both will be divided according to President Roosevelt's wish, with 70 per cent going to local boards for crippled children, and 30 per cent going to the National Commission for Infantile Paralysis Research.

Drill to Honor Kromer.

Wintry Days Send Society Folk Abroad

Mrs. Joseph Bradley and Daughter Will Sail in February.

George Hewitt Myers to Make Cruise to Honolulu.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Snowy winter days like this bring to the minds of members of Capital society pictures of warmer lands—tropical islands, blue seas and flower-decked landscapes. And so a few have made plans to sail shortly for these enchanting places to remain until Washington is again warm and spring-like.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers have planned an interesting trip on which they will be accompanied by their two daughters, Miss Mary Myers and Miss Louise Chase Myers, the latter a debutante of this season. They will leave on February 19 for California, where they will spend a short time before sailing on March 8 from San Francisco for Honolulu. They will be absent until the early part of April, when they will return to their home on S street.

Bradleys to Sail.

Mrs. Joseph Bradley and her daughter, Miss Mary Parrish Bradley, will also leave Washington about the middle of February and will sail from New York for Europe. They will be accompanied by Miss Elizabeth Shouse and Miss Marion Shouse, daughters of Mrs. Lawrence Groner. They will go first to Italy, where they will visit for several weeks, and later will go to France before returning to Washington in the middle of April. While in Italy they will see Miss Christine Long, daughter of the United States Ambassador to Italy and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, who sailed last Saturday to return to Rome.

Mr. and Mrs. Gwynn Gardiner, Jr., are also planning a trip, but not until the end of next month. They will join Mrs. Gardiner's sister, Mrs. Rose Saul Montgomery, in New York and sail for a Caribbean cruise of several weeks. Mrs. Montgomery is spending the winter in New York, where she is studying sculpture at one of the metropolitan art schools. Mrs. Gardiner was formerly Miss Teresa Saul, daughter of Mrs. B. F. Saul.

Newbolds on Cruise.

Aboard the Empress of Britain, which sailed last Saturday, were Mr. and Mrs. Fleming Newbold and their daughter, Miss Nancy Newbold, who embarked on a world cruise. Aboard the same ship are Mr. and Mrs. John Oliver LaGorce and Mr. and Mrs. Gene Tunney.

When the Empress of Britain reaches China, some time in March, she will pick up another Washingtonian to return to the Capital early in April—Miss Katherine Dunlop, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Dunlop. Miss Dunlop has been in the Orient since last summer, visiting Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Clark. Mrs. Clark, the former Miss Ann Covington, daughter of Judge and Mrs. J. Harry Covington, and her small daughter spent several months here in the early summer, and on their return to join Mr. Clark, Miss Dunlop, a close friend of Mrs. Clark, accompanied them. Mr. Clark is Third Secretary of the United States Legation at Peiping.

Judge Hopkins, Of Kansas, Wed Miss Hafford

Bride, Kentucky Native, Is Active in Club and Educational Work.

Miss Lida Hafford, of Carrollton, Ky., was married Tuesday to Judge Richard J. Hopkins, of Kansas, at the home of her sister, Mrs. George Boorom Winslow, in Carrollton. A few relatives and friends attended.

Judge Hopkins is a graduate of the University of Kansas and received his LL.B. from Northwestern University. After graduation he practiced law in Chicago. Judge Hopkins has served as a member of the House of Representatives, speaker pro-tem of House, Lieutenant Governor, city attorney of Garden City, attorney general and associate justice of the Supreme Court of Kansas. In 1929 he was appointed judge of the United States District Court.

Mrs. Hopkins is a native Kentuckian, a graduate of the University of Michigan and has been active in educational and club work. During the war she was State director of women's work and executive secretary of the Red Cross for Kentucky. During this same period she served the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs in turn as secretary, State chairman of civics, vice president and general federation director from the State.

During the presidency of Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, Mrs. Hopkins served the General Federation of Women's Clubs as secretary of the department of American citizenship, vice chairman of the legislative department, representing the organization on the Women's Joint Congressional Committee, and director of the national headquarters here.

Mrs. Hopkins was chairman of the national demonstration of better homes in America, which was sponsor for the well-known Home, Sweet Home house, now the Girl Scouts Little House, here. She was executive chairman, with Mrs. Herbert Hoover as honorary chairman, of the national convention of the Women's Committee on Law Enforcement.

Knight to Give A Talk on Art

Will Discuss Paintings at National Society's Luncheon.

Mr. Aston Knight, American artist, will speak at the luncheon to be given by the National Society of American Art at the Shoreham Tuesday. Mr. Knight passes several months each year at his chateau in Normandy painting landscapes. His favorite subject is flower gardens and he maintains a large staff of gardeners.

Several of Mr. Knight's paintings showing the gardens of Normandy will be exhibited. His recent painting of Mount Vernon will be of considerable interest here.

The exhibition will include examples of the work of George Elmer Browne, Harry W. Watrous, Ettore Caser, Irving Brokaw, Nanette Calder, Stephanus P. Cole, John W. Dunsmore, George Wharton Edwards, William H. Hyde, George Lawrence Nelson, Ernest Lawson, Clarence F. Busch, F. Luis Mora, Edith Prellwitz, Jane Peterson, Cergeant Kendall and other well-known painters.

Legionnaires To Give Dinner For Dr. Wilmer

Notables Will Be Guests at Gardner Post's Party Tonight.

Dr. William Holland Wilmer, noted ophthalmologist, will be honored at the "homecoming" reception and banquet to be given by the Augustus B. Gardner post of the District of Columbia Department, American Legion, tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the Raleigh Hotel.

Dr. Wilmer, who was a brigadier general in the Army during the World War, has just returned after completion of his tour of duty with the famous Wilmer Institute of Baltimore which was dedicated in his honor some years ago by his patients, aided by the Rockefeller Foundation.

Among the distinguished guests will be the Rev. W. Coleman Neyils, president of Georgetown Unidean of Georgetown University Medical School; Rear Admiral Perceval S. Rossiter, Surgeon General of the Navy; Dr. E. B. McKinley, dean of the Medical School of George Washington University; Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs; Dr. A. B. Bennett, president of the District of Columbia Medical Society; Col. Julius I. Peyser, Capt. Watson B. Miller, national rehabilitation officer of the legion; Dr. Prentiss Willson, president of the Clinico-Pathological Society of the District of Columbia; Dr. Charles M. Griffith, medical director of the Veterans' Administration; Col. John Thomas Taylor, vice chairman of the American Legion legislative committee, and the Rev. Ze Barney Phillips, D.D., chaplain of the Senate.

Maj. Gen. Robert U. Patterson, Surgeon General of the Army, is chairman of the dinner committee, which also includes Maj. James A. Purcell, commander of the Gardner Post; Col. Joseph H. Bryan, Brig. Gen. William E. Horton, Mr. Walter Bruce Howe, Mr. Theodore Cogswell and Mr. Frank A. Dawson. Mr. Benjamin S. Minor, a life-long friend of Dr. Wilmer, will deliver the address of welcome. Other speakers will be Mr. James O'Connor Roberts, department commander of the legion, and Maj. Purcell.

Italy - America Society Meets At Mayflower

Motion Pictures in Natural Colors Presented by John V. Hansen.

Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, Senator and Mrs. Marcus A. Coolidge, Senator and Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis and Representative and Mrs. George Burnham attended the meeting of the Italy-American Society at the Mayflower last night. Mr. Walter D. Davidge, the president, presided.

Mr. John V. Hansen presented motion pictures in natural colors of "Seven Enchanting Centers in Italy." Mr. Hansen is one of the foremost exponents of motion pictures in color, and the ones shown last night are among his best. The views of Venice were particularly colorful. Mr. Hansen claims to have caught nearly a half a hundred different shades of blues in his photographs, many of which were shown in his final films of the Atlantic Ocean depicting a trip back to this country from Italy. A brilliantly-colored film of amaryllis made at one of the annual showings here was a fitting climax to the entertainment.

Embassy Officials Attend.

Among others present were the Counselor of the Italian Embassy and Marchese Rossi Longhi, the Naval Attache and Marchese Cugia de Sant'Orsola, and Signor Giuseppe Tommasi, of the Italian Embassy.

Also Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, of the District Supreme Court, and Mrs. Wheat, Mrs. Frances Newlands, Gen. and Mrs. Dion Williams, Mrs. Oscar Jarecki, Mrs. Effinham L. Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Caldwell and their guest, Mrs. Marion Raulston, of California; Dr. and Mrs. Rufus Graves Mather, Mr. and Mrs. Fulton Lewis, Miss Maud L. Davidge, Dr. and Mrs. James S. Montgomery, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. John C. Fremont, Mrs. Thomas H. C. Reed, Mrs. Churchill Candee, Baroness von Below, Miss Margaret Delano Gage, Miss Daisy Prentice, Miss Mary Rossi, of Geneva, Italy.

The Rev. Coleman Nevils, S. J., Mr. and Mrs. H. Blackiston Wilkins, Miss Louise Hallet, Miss Alice Wilkins, Miss Alice Tweedy, Miss Janet Richards, Mrs. Edward E. Robbins, Mrs. W. Puriance Tams, Mrs. J. Thompson Wailes, Mrs. Harry Moore Payne, Dr. and Mrs. Gregg Birdsall, Mr. and Mrs. Cabot Stevens, Miss Janet Ball, the Right Rev. Egidio Vagnozzi, the Right Rev. Edward Buckey, the Rev. Francesco Lardoni, D. D., Brig. Gen. William E. Horton, Mr. Charles Mason Remey, Gen. Rupert Blue, Mrs. Earl Gray and Mrs. John V. Hansen.

Stevens Give Supper.

Mr. and Mrs. Cabot Stevens entertained in honor of Representative and Mrs. George Burnham, of California, following the meeting of the society.

The supper guests after the motion picture were Senator and Mrs. Coolidge, Senator David I. Walsh, Mrs. William H. King, Mrs. John Jacob Rogers, Representative and Mrs. William Whittington, Col. and Mrs. Ira Copley, of California; Representative and Mrs. James M. Beck, Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mr. Nevils and Dr. Charles Henry Butler.

The members of the society who were guests at the table were Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Ransley, Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Harriman, Mrs. Strickland Gillilan, Mrs. Peter A. Drury, Miss Louise Clement, Mrs. Elizabeth Northrop and Dr. Maris Mollari.

Copelands Are Hosts For Senator's Sister

Senator and Mrs. Royal S. Copeland entertained at dinner in the ballroom at the Shoreham last evening for the former's sister, Miss Copeland, and Mrs. McComber, who are their guests at the hotel for a brief stay.

Mrs. Copeland, with her sister-in-law and Mrs. McComber, expect to leave today for Venice, Fla., where Senator and Mrs. Copeland have a winter home.

Town Chatter

Who's Where—and Why, Around the Capital.

Strolling through the Mayflower lobby, Mr. Elliott Roosevelt looks every inch the country gentleman in his leather topcoat. Walking down Massachusetts avenue, Sir Ronald Lindsay looks every foot the Britisher with his cane. The Ambassador is over 6 feet tall.

Barbara Wright and Mr. de Balasy, of the Hungarian Legation, were enjoying each other's company at dinner recently. They look well together, for they are both tall and distinguished in appearance; besides they have the same brand of humor and whimsy.

Charlotte Mayo is soon to try her luck once more on Broadway. We all hope she won't have to listen very long to that familiar refrain: "Nothing today, dearie; come in tomorrow," which the theatrical agents chant almost in their sleep.

With all the scurrying around to find houses, Commander and Mrs. Andrew Hickey have achieved what would seem the impossible—they have rented two houses, one in Georgetown and one on New Hampshire avenue. They live in the one with a leaky roof.

The Mayan ruins in Mexico and Guatemala are attracting more and more people. With these interesting relics as an objective, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss plan to leave this week-end for a six weeks trip through Mexico.

If there were more people like Ralph Hill, the unemployment problem might be solved. He has been "doing over" his house for a year and a half.

The hunting crowd of Warrenton carried out a sound idea for raising money for two local charities, the Hospital and the Country Club. They had a rummage sale where people disposed of "duds" received at Christmas, or maybe shoes purchased for the eyes rather than the feet. A chic chapeau was bought for 75 cents and worn to a tea at the Carharts. Think how noble you could feel in getting rid of something you couldn't abide, all in the name of sweet charity!

We are under the impression that Helen Walker and Russel Snodgrass are seeing a great deal of each other these days.

Annual S. A. R. Ball Held at Mayflower

The annual ladies' ball, given by the District of Columbia Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, was held last evening in the Mayflower Hotel, in the main ballroom.

In the receiving line were Dr. Clifton P. Clark, president of the society, and Mrs. Clark; Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, commandant of the United States Coast Guard, who was speaker of the evening, and Mrs. Hamlet; Miss Helen Harman, vice president for the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution; Mrs. Charles A. Swann Sinclair, national president Children of the American Revolution, and Mr. Charles C. Griggs, president-elect of the District of Columbia Society, Sons of the American Revolution.

Loftins Dinner Hosts In Shoreham Ballroom

Comdr. Frank Loftin, U. S. N., and Mrs. Loftin, were hosts at dinner in the ballroom at the Shoreham last evening.

The guests included Capt. and Mrs. Stanford C. Hooper, Capt. and Mrs. Lawrence P. Treadwell, the Naval Attache of the British Embassy, Capt. A. R. Dewar; Commander and Mrs. Isaac C. Bogart, Commander Luther Sheldon, Mrs. Arthur MacArthur and Mrs. Noble Barnes.

Senators' Wives To Be 'at Home' This Afternoon

Hostesses Include Mrs. Sheppard, Mrs. Keyes and Mrs. Brown.

This afternoon is "Senatorial Day," when the wives of the Senators receive, and among those who will be at home will be Mrs. Morris Sheppard, who will be assisted part of the time by Mrs. John Nance Garner, and Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, president of the Chautauqua Women's Club.

Assisting Mrs. Sheppard will be Mrs. Tom Connally, Mrs. Alben Barkley, Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mrs. Ollie James, Mrs. Mark Goodwin, and Mrs. Marshall Diggs.

Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes and Mrs. Fred H. Brown, wives of the Senators from New Hampshire, will entertain at tea at the former's home, 111 North Alfred street, Alexandria, Va., for the delegates from Maine to the Conference on the Cause and Cure of War. Mrs. William N. Rogers and Mrs. Charles W. Tobey, wives of the Representatives in Congress from New Hampshire, will preside at the tea table.

Receiving for the first will be Miss Ida V. Guffy and Miss Pauletta Guffy, sisters of Senator Guffy, of Pennsylvania, who are acting as his official hostesses. They will receive from 4 until 6 o'clock in the patio of the Carlton Hotel.

Assisting them will be Mrs. Edward Robbins, Mrs. Barkley, Mrs. James Alexander Lyon, Mrs. James J. Davis, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, and Mrs. Barry Mohun. Out-of-town guests who will assist the hostesses include Mrs. Anthony Biddle, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Hale Steinman, of Lancaster, Pa., and Mrs. George H. Earle, wife of the Governor of Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Joseph O'Mahoney To Give Luncheon Today

Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, wife of Senator O'Mahoney, is entertaining at luncheon today in her apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel in honor of Mrs. Paul Greever, wife of the new Representative from Wyoming. Covers will be laid for 30 and the ranking guest will be Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce. Luncheon will be served at one large U-shaped table decorated with three centerpieces of spring flowers set in moss and sprays of fern.

Restore NATURAL WHITENESS to Dingy Teeth—in a week

A Discovery that is Giving Millions Brilliant White Teeth. Try It.

Here's why Kolynos gets rid of stain and tarnish and cleans teeth so much whiter and brighter than anything else you can use. It contains properties not found in any ordinary toothpaste or powder.

These properties destroy millions of germs that lodge on the teeth and make them look dull, dingy and yellow.

See for yourself how much whiter Kolynos makes your teeth than old-time preparations. Use a half-inch of this special toothpaste on a dry brush morning and night. Your teeth will look brighter the first day, much brighter the second. And soon they'll again gleam with their natural, beautiful whiteness. Then you'll agree that Kolynos is the easiest and quickest way to make dull, dingy teeth clear, bright and shining white. Start using Kolynos today.

How Reducing May Be Turned Into a Sport!

It's All Scientific, Though, in This Place Where Poundage Departs.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IF AN UNRULY appetite has betrayed you into too many chocolate sundaes or the temperamental weather made you succumb to inertia and you find you've too many pounds where you least want them, then we've found the very place that you should go. Here you'll find reducing has been turned into a sport, and you'll soon become an avid fan.

It's all very scientific, though. First of all, you have a physical examination, and from then on you're all set to go—and so are the surplus pounds!

You begin with a workout in the gym. There's a medicine ball, climbing bars, a rowing machine and any number of other things which you tackle, one after the other. An instructor will see to it that you practice with all these, and then she'll give you a few exercises that further the good work. Not only do they make you feel good, but they reduce your hips, your stomach, your waist, firm flabby muscles, taper down thighs and take off double chins.

The Shower Room.

From the gym you go to the shower room. Here you're placed in an electric cabinet and toasted for a while. Your pores open and gradually the thousands of impurities that clog your system seep out. Now for a brisk and stimulating shower and from here to the massage table, where a woman with strong and gentle hands gives you a marvelously invigorating rubdown. Meantime, you bask for a few minutes under a sun lamp that makes tropical beaches seem not so far away, after all.

After you're finished for the day you feel as luxurious as a Persian kitten.

And when you step on those scales and see the happy results you could literally purr with pleasure.

Now that there is such a delightful reducing course there's no need for anyone to be stout and flabby. Those who work all day can take the course at night. They will find that it's one of the best investments they can make and they will also find that the cost is amazingly reasonable.

Regency Bonnets.

Again, the pendulum has swung. Those adorably feminine little bonnets which so becoming graced the belles of the English regency are here to do their bit for the young ladies of 1935.

There is an unusually attractive assortment of these in a downtown store. They come in straws, felts, and straw fabrics trimmed with plumes, flowers, and ribbons.

If you haven't tried on a bonnet you should. Nine out of ten women see them and say, "Lovely—but they'd be awful on me!" But here's the funny part. Bonnets are surprisingly becoming. They cast flattering shadows over your eyes, and give you a new kind of feminine grace.

Bargain Seekers.

If you have 29 cents floating around in your purse with no particular strings tied to it you'll find that it will be great fun to go shopping in the bargain section of a local store. What is usually the gift department has been turned for the time being into a haven for bargain seekers and tables have been set aside for the display of the vastly reduced merchandise.

One table bears a sign, "29 cents." The merchandise here includes variety enough to fill a Christmas stocking. There are dessert spoons, pie and cake servers, carving knives, cigarette cases, double-drink jiggers, wooden placques, make-up mirrors, sugar and cream sets, powder boxes, sets of six salt and peppers, and at least a dozen other items.

Mothers Urged to Teach Children to Find Way Home if Lost.

By Alice Fox Pitts.

A FATHER writes to say that he believes his wife has done an excellent thing in teaching their 2-year-old how to find her way home if ever she is lost.

"Ever since she started talking," he says, "her mother has been training her so that now, at two and a half, she can tell anyone her street address, the name of the city and State where she lives, her telephone number, my name and the place where I work.

"What's more, her mother has taken her to policemen on the street, and arranged for them to ask her for this information so that she would not be speechless with fright in case she ever got lost and was picked up by an officer."

It's an excellent idea, and a mother will have no difficulty in finding a friendly policeman to cooperate in this training.

Mrs. Jenckes, Indiana, Is Home Protagonist

Woman Representative Favors Bonus and Back Pay.

Congress in future will devote more attention to the problems of homemakers, believes Representative Virginia E. Jenckes.

(Associated Press.)

THE LADY from Indiana, Representative Virginia E. Jenckes, views Congress as a machine modernized to aid the homemaker, and likely to do more for her in the future. "For the first time in history, there's an electric connection between Congress and the home," she said today.

"The acts of the Seventy-third Congress affected every woman in every home. The woman's viewpoint here in Congress is therefore a very necessary thing. She immediately gets the reaction on the family budget of the things done down here."

Has Seen One Session.

One complete session of Congress has already rolled over Mrs. Jenckes, who has coronet-braided head, and hazel eyes, accented by rimless nose-glasses. In the myriad details of her own days she keeps her hand in at civic housekeeping by serving on the District of Columbia committee, of which Representative Mary Norton is chairman; has a place on the Civil Service Committee which this year will consider bringing under civil service rules the agencies created by the last Congress; and is a member of the Mines and Mining Committee, which seemingly is a queer place for a woman, but the largest coal mine in Indiana is in her district, and she once had a big coal mine on one of her farms, but it got flooded.

Works for Public Health.

On the national scene, Mrs. Jenckes fights for payment of the bonus; on the local scene, for restoration of the pay cut to Federal workers. Washington knows her, too, as head of the sub-committee dealing with public health which aims for alley-clearance; and a member of the committee headed by young Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, which is starting a crime investigation here.

No complaint has Mrs. Jenckes on the gallantry of her fellow members. Senator McCarran, of Nevada campaigned for her in the primaries; and Representative Byrns, who later became Speaker, made two speeches in her behalf in her close but successful race against the former Republican member, Fred Purnell.

She has zest for play as well as for work, her average day starting at 7:30 and continuing until midnight. "I like to dance, play contract, ride horseback, walk, and drive a car," she said.

Her companion in all these things is likely to be her daughter, Virginia, who lives with her mother in an apartment here, and serves as a voluntary secretary.

Bananas Win Belated Rating As Health Aid

Fruit Once Considered as Indigestible Now Given to Children.

By Dorothea Duncan.

AT LAST the banana has come out from under the ban of disapproval and has attained a place of distinction in its own right. The housewife no longer mentions it in terms of starch and indigestibility. It took a great many years, but now that superstition has been overruled, the banana can proudly take its rightful place on the menu.

The result of some serious research into the secret properties of the banana has revealed important dietary factors. This bit of fruit in the gay yellow jacket contains carbohydrate, of course, but if allowed to become fully ripe before eating the starch will change to sugar and the fruit is then quite readily digestible. Here are the banana secrets that have been hidden so long: Bananas provide us with a trio of vitamins, A, B and C, to be exact, a fair source of iron, calcium, phosphorous, and magnesium. All these factors make the banana an important figure in our dietary, and one to be used frequently, rather than spurned.

Versatile Fruit.

When you plan to serve bananas, don't forget that they are a most versatile fruit. Bananas and cream occasionally, yet, but try them in other dishes. There must be hundreds of ways to serve them. In their native countries, the East and West Indies, Central America and Cuba, the raw fruit is supplemented by various other uses. If the banana is cooked it is not necessarily a wholly ripe one. It is baked and otherwise cooked, both as a vegetable and a dessert, made into flour for bread, dried black in the sun after the manner of figs, preserved with sugar and vinegar, and pressed and fermented to yield a spirituous drink resembling cider.

The preparation of most of these island and South American dishes are foreign to us, but baked bananas are winning favor both as a dessert or an accompaniment for the meat course. They are excellent, too, for the children's dessert, because they are nourishing, palatable and easy to fix. Try one of the two following recipes for baked bananas and one of your dessert problems for the week is sure to be solved.

Baked Bananas in the Skin.

Bake bananas in the skins on the rack of a moderate oven (375 degrees F.), 10 to 15 minutes, or until dark in color and soft to the touch. Serve with the meat course in the skins; or peel carefully, sprinkle with powdered sugar and a few drops of lemon juice, and serve hot as a dessert.

Baker Peeled Bananas.

Peel bananas. Arrange in shallow, ovenproof baking dish and sprinkle with lemon juice. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 10 to 12 minutes, or until tender. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve hot.

If your family expresses a desire for the return of spring and a good shortcake, take this as a cue to serve banana shortcake for dinner that very evening.

Banana Shortcake.

2 cups flour
¾ teaspoon salt
4-5 sliced bananas
1-3 cup shortening
3 teaspoons baking powder
4 tablespoons sugar
½ to ¾ cup milk
1 cup cream, whipped.

Mix and sift dry ingredients and rub in the fat with the fingers or cut in with a knife. Add liquid enough to make a soft dough. Divide the dough in half and roll or pat each half the same size and shape. Place one layer on a greased pan, butter slightly and top with the other layer. Bake 15 to 20 minutes in a hot oven (450 degrees F.). Split, and cover one layer with sliced bananas. Place the other crust on top, cover with whipped cream and garnish with sliced bananas.

Here are some excellent banana sandwich combinations that should be appropriate for the school luncheon box. Use rounds of banana in combination with peanut butter, creamed cheese and jelly, sliced ham and pickle, or crushed banana with chopped peanuts, raisins and nuts, crisp, crumbled bacon and chopped apples, or deviled ham.

What TODAY Means

"Aquarius."

IF January 24 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:15 a. m. to 1:15 p. m., from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m. and from 8:15 to 10:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:15 to 8:15 a. m., from 4:15 to 6:15 p. m. and from 10:15 p. m. until midnight.

Personal appearance may carry a great deal of weight on this January 24 in both business as well as social contacts. There may be a prevalence of a supercritical attitude prevailing among the people you might possibly meet on this date, but do not let it disturb your self-possession, as it is probably not assumed deliberately.

If a woman and January 24 is your birthday, you are remarkably capable and have the ability to dominate not only people, but situations as well. Be careful your realization of your ability does not cause you to drift into the habit of being domineering, for it might interfere seriously with either your social or business career, as it would tend to create unpopularity. There is a strong possibility that you will become well off financially.

If a man and January 24 is your natal day, if you make it a point to be both gracious and considerate of others, your business and social success will be rapidly advanced. Music, journalism, banking and educational work are among the lines that should offer congenial employment. Married life should prove very attractive to one of your nature.

Strictly Speaking

Figures of Speech.

1. What is hyperbole? Give an example.
2. Define personification.
3. What type of figure of speech is metonymy?

Check Here.

1. Hyperbole is overstatement, not intended to deceive. It is often used humorously, as in this sentence, "His hands dangled a mile out of his sleeves."
2. Personification consists in giving personal attributes to inanimate objects or abstract ideas, as follows: "I like nothing so much as listening to the voice of the sea that calls me away from my landbound tasks."
3. Metonymy is the use of one word for another it suggests. "The order came from the White House (the President)."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: How can a girl develop her type? I mean, how can a girl know what type she belongs to, in order to dress the part, choose cosmetics, arrange her hair suitably, and develop the mannerisms of personality that would make her most attractive?

* * * *

I am 18 years old. I have straight, rather sandy-colored, hair, blue gray eyes, weigh 118 pounds and am 5 feet 6 inches tall. My features are fairly good and rather small. I have nice teeth. I am not athletic nor particularly bookish either.

I have always worn rather plain clothes, halfway between sports and tailored. I am going to business school here in Washington, and none of the girls I am associated with seem to have any real style or distinction in appearance. What would you advise me to do to develop a striking appearance?

Time and Money Needed.

DEAR PLAIN GIRL: In my opinion, the first requisite for developing distinctive and flattering style in dress is an intelligent interest in the subject. That you seem to have. Also, a certain expenditure of money is necessarily involved. Even as Rome wasn't built in a day, neither is an intrinsic artistic relationship between a girl and her wardrobe.

It may take months, or even years, for you to arrive at that stage of style knowledge which leads you promptly to reject this and as quickly to claim that other as your own. You must learn to disregard high fashion, to ignore the salesgirl cliche, "But this is what they're wearing," at least to the extent that you never succumb to a fad as such, but only adopt it when it's particularly becoming and peculiarly suitable to you.

The girl who, just once, contrives a really smart and at the same time becoming outfit, has her feet on the rungs of the ladder leading to individual style. Marathon Round Table of Conference Seeks to Organize Sentiment for Peace

Origin of Name Is Explained By Mrs. Beggs

Chairman Credits Suggestion to Mrs. Catt and Tells Its Aims.

By Elizabeth Young.

NEARLY HALFWAY down the list of names of executive committee members, printed on the neat buff program of the tenth annual conference on the Cause and Cure of War—currently in session at the Washington Hotel—one's eye stops at the words:

Marathon Round Tables . . .

Everybody has an idea, varying from incoherent to concise, of what a round table is. But a marathon round table . . . about the Cause and Cure of War . . .

To ask about that, surely, is not to violate entirely one's pretension to national, even world mindedness. Yet all these delegates, smartly gowned, eager faced, intent—the indisputable cream of the social, the economic, the cultural, the intellectual life of this country—give answers and explanations too vague, too hurried, too absentminded to justify recording.

Call Issued for Chairman.

We'll ask Mrs. Beggs. Where is Mrs. Beggs? Someone who knows her volunteers to fetch Mrs. Beggs. (". . . the publicity will be valuable . . .") Ah, here she is.

"Mrs. Beggs——!"

But now I'm so fascinated by the beauty, the rose-like beauty, of this woman from New Jersey, that I must force myself to remember what it was I wanted to know.

She comes swiftly across the threshold, wearing a green knit suit, a jaunty shoulder length caracul cape, a casual smart black hat. Her face is sweet and bright with a radiant inner flame. The bony structure is perfect. She is more than 30. Less than 40.

"Where shall we go? Up to my room—? It's quieter there. All right, then. Seventh floor—" (to the elevator man). "Here we are. Seven-eleven. Seven come eleven. That ought to be a lucky number, oughtn't it? Does this heavy odor of flowers bother you? They're all for Miss Buttenheim. She has hordes of admirers. I'm thinking of wiring my husband and demanding some floral tribute . . ."

Now, about that Marathon . . . in the Marathon Round Tables . . .

Mrs. Catt's Suggestion.

"It was Mrs. Catt's suggestion. Her name for the round table discussions through which we hope to organize public opinion to protect the world against future wars,"

Promoting the study of national policies which will strengthen international cooperative effort for world peace is the work of Mrs. Frederic Beggs, above, chairman of the Marathon Round Tables' committee of the Conference on the Cause and Cure of War.

Mrs. Beggs says, coming suddenly and directly to the half-forgotten point.

"She (Mrs. Catt) liked the word 'marathon' because it carries a challenge to continue until the ultimate goal is reached. The goal, in this case, is an enlightened and effective public opinion which can protect civilization from demolition by modern warfare.

"Of course, some might say that 'marathon' implies utter exhaustion and dropping dead when the goal is reached, too. And it has come to be associated with marathon dances and even flag-pole sitting, I admit.

"But why let a perfectly good word like 'marathon' sink to such a low level of acceptance, we say. So we've taken up the word and restored to it the meaning it started out to have."

It was following the seventh annual conference on the cause and cure of war, three years ago, that titan-spirited Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, inspired genius among modern woman crusaders for world peace and all its constructive appurtenances, devised the idea of the marathon round table.

Program Is Flexible.

It is an idea based on the recognition of a need for more widespread education in the fundamental causes of friction between nations, leading to war. The premise of the Marathon Round Table's program of study, which last year held the attention of men and women in 437 communities scattered through 38 States of the Union, is that weaknesses in the existing machinery of national and international policy must be discovered and corrected if war is to be obviated.

The program is flexible, the round table committee provides "background material," and discussions may be completed any time during the year.

"Peace does not lie simply in the absence of armed conflict. Elements which could cause an explosion and lead to war are present in the world today just as definitely as they were in 1914, in spite of the efforts of the world peace system to control them," Mrs. Beggs tells me. "The marathon plan for round table discussions is proceeding on the theory that educated public opinion alone can protect the world against war. Not until national policies throughout the world are intelligently directed toward strengthening peace machinery and toward removal of friction between nations, can we hope for an end of bloody sacrifices on the altar of national patriotism."

Mrs. Catt was first chairman of the Marathon Round Tables' Committee. Mrs. Beggs is her direct successor. Mrs. Beggs' devotion to, and respect for Mrs. Catt is slightly tinged with awe.

Praises Predecessor.

"To come into her presence is to feel, suddenly, inexplicably, that I am just a little girl . . ." Mrs. Beggs confesses.

"What is it about her? There never was a kindlier, more understanding—" we begin. But just then the door flies inward, to admit a veritable whirlwind of feminine energy. Her name is Margaret Buttenheim. She's tall and thin and swift and graceful. Her eyes are black as midnight and her beret tilts rakishly forward.

The affection between her and Mrs. Beggs is unmistakably deep and gayly casual. They are roommates at the conference, and they work together on the Marathon Round Table programs. Miss Buttenheim is chaiman of the readers' course. She prepares the bibliographies.

I leave them debating what they will wear to dinner.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Heart Cripples.

IT often requires courage to face facts, for facts are sometimes unpleasant. When health is concerned the better informed we are the more able will we be to protect ourselves and our families.

We now recognize that heart disease carries the baton and leads the cohorts of death, and it has been estimated that there are more than five million heart cripples in the United States. Half of these are unable to engage in their regular vocations and the other half pursue their daily tasks at somewhat reduced efficiency. To put it another way, approximately 4 per cent of the population of this country is living under the physical handicap of heart disease. The problem therefore is an important one demanding widespread knowledge of prevention as well as "how to live" with a damaged heart.

The foundations of heart disease are, for the most part, laid in early childhood and belong to the rheumatic fever group of infections. Conditions such as tonsilitis, scarlet fever, influenza, common colds, and in fact any acute infection may lead to heart involvement.

Although the patient recovers from an acute infection, slight damage to a heart valve, if it has occurred, may not be discernible for many years. Now and then changes occur slowly but steadily and the individual may find himself in middle life with shortness of breath, swelling of the ankles, and other early signs of heart failure.

The bright side of the picture has been turned to our gaze through a recognition of the importance of removing foci of infection, and this has greatly reduced the number of cases of rheumatic disease. Again the yearly health audit has detected incipient or beginning signs of heart involvement, with the result that proper management has been instituted and the patient protected.

Some years ago it was my privilege to observe the clinical skill of the late Sir James Mackenzie, a distinguished British heart specialist. One afternoon a fine specimen of a man, approximately 50 years old, was seated in his waiting room. He called my attention to the patient with the remark, "That man has so-and-so," naming a fairly serious heart lesion. "He has not missed a day from his work in 30 years." The case was typical of what good management by a skilled physician can accomplish.

Grand Jury Indictments Seen for 10

Charges May Involve Prominent Persons in Franklin Co.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 23.—At least ten persons face indictment by the Federal grand jury investigating an alleged liquor conspiracy in Franklin County, according to reports current about the Federal courthouse here.

It is understood that the grand jurors are voting on the persons they believe involved in the conspiracy. Drafting indictments, containing numerous counts, will follow. Reports are that the grand jury decided that ten other persons were not implicated in the alleged whisky ring.

In spite of the snowstorm which blocked many roads, all the 20 grand jurors reported for duty this morning, the twenty-third day they have been in session since October. Frank S. Tavenner, assistant United States attorney for western Virginia, estimates that two days more will be required for the grand jury deliberations before the indictments actually are framed.

While there has been no announcement, it is said that several persons the Government alleges are implicated in the conspiracy are prominent citizens of Franklin and adjacent counties. All 200 witnesses who appeared before the grand jury signed waivers of immunity, and it is hinted that some of the witnesses may be indicted with the others.

This is the first effort of the U. S. Treasury Department to investigate a conspiracy not to pay tax on liquor since the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, and the probe is being watched with interest.

Tire Shop Fire Fatal to Owner

Fire of undetermined origin early yesterday killed a 53-year-old tire shop proprietor, razed his shop, and burned to death his two faithful dogs, who refused to leave their master when the flames swept the room in the shop they knew as home.

The victim, Joseph Varin, was found in the establishment with the charred remains of the two pets.

An autopsy performed on Varin late yesterday by Dr. W. C. Welburn, Arlington County coroner, revealed that he died of suffocation.

The shop was located on River road, near Addiston. Varin is survived by a wife, who lives near Alexandria. He was a French Canadian, who came here about 10 years ago and entered business.

Tarred Man Agrees To Leave Elkins

Masked Assailants Seized Couple in Jail.

Elkins, W. Va., Jan. 23 (AP).—Peter Rimo, one of two persons tarred and feathered by a group of masked men, says he is going to take his assailants' warning seriously and get out of town by Saturday.

The 57-year-old man and a girl listed by police as Miss Sylvia Tingler, 19, were taken from the Elkins Jail yesterday and on an old tennis court near Davis-Elkins College, were tarred and feathered by the band.

The couple had been serving terms on charges of disorderly conduct.

Ordered to leave the city "by Saturday," they said, the man and woman made their way back to jail in blankets furnished by the group of men. The couple apparently suffered no ill effects.

North Wales Hunt Club Rich in Virginia Tradition

Fauquier Clubhouse Has Walls 6 Feet Thick to Stave Off Indian Raids; Early American Kitchen Preserved; Started in 1773.

Warrenton, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Mellowed by traditions launched prior to the American Revolution, Warrenton's famous North Wales Club with its 67 buildings and 4-mile steeplechase run, today has the distinction of being one of the country's most prominent headquarters for the hunting social class so often coupled with the history of Fauquier County.

The exclusive club, set in a tract of 1,000 acres and owned solely by a group of New York and Warrenton sportsmen, was built with colonial sturdiness in 1773. Walls 6 feet thick, provisions to handle an Indian raid, a wine cellar and a typical early American kitchen have all been preserved in the building's recent renovation. Two spacious wings branching from the original part of the mansion, constructed in latter years, have enlarged the historic building to an impressive 72 rooms. The west wing contains a ballroom which held 400 persons during the last New Year celebration.

North Wales has Edward M. Weld, prominent New Yorker, to thank for its present position as one of the show places of the Old Dominion. Weld, owner of the well-known steeplechaser, "Weldship," bought North Wales in 1914 and turned it over into an advantageous training ground for his stable of thoroughbreds. In his process of remodeling, box and rare shrubbery were imported and replanted by a squad of landscapers and gardeners. Soil experts, engineers and tree surgeons spent many months in grooming the retreat to its present state.

The entrance to the handsome Georgian residence is guarded by a lodge house situated on Spring road. It is built of natural stone, matching the main house.

From the Welds, North Wales passed to C. A. Bond, clothing manufacturer and said to be originator of the "two-pants suit." Bond's ownership was short lived, however, and the estate went into the hands of the present ownership of millionaires. It is from this group that North Wales is often called "the millionaires' club."

The original part of the house is listed as one of the early mansions of the county. Early records describe the grounds as being "part of a great tract of 2,900 acres," which was deeded to Capt. John Hooe and his brother, Rice Hooe, in 1718, by Catherine, Lady Fairfax. A daughter of the former, Anne Hooe Allason, commenced building North Wales three years before the Revolution, but it was not completed until after the last guns of Yorktown had been silenced. The section was then within the boundaries of Old Richmond County, Fauquier's predecessor. North Wales remained in possession of the descendants of Capt. Hooe until one Henry Washington Ashton sold the estate to Weld.

Tests Uncover Poor Quality Of Moonshine

Richmond, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Moonshine of the 1935 vintage appears to have improved very little under competition by the State alcoholic beverage control system, and it still is of a quality far inferior to the cheapest of the legal brands, according to reports from the ABC Board laboratory.

The tests seem to show that the economic pressure has become too great to enable the moonshiners to match the product of the legitimate distillers. Predictions that home-made liquor might match quality with regular liquor have not been sustained so far as Virginia is concerned.

Current analyses indicate that 1935 moonshine is artificially colored in most instances, contains foreign proteins, some of them poisonous to some people; evil odors, low alcoholic content as a rule, is cut with alcohol, wine, cider and in some cases is flavored with regular liquor.

Is distilled too rapidly and contains mash residue that gives it its sour taste.

Action Urged For Job Relief

Bland Exhorts District to Seek Benefits of 4 Billion U. S. Sum.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Urging "active, energetic, persistent and continuous work," Congressman S. Otis Bland has written to constituents here and elsewhere in the First District advising immediate action to secure the benefits of the $4,000,000,000 Public Works Appropriations asked by President Roosevelt and soon to be provided by Congress.

Upon enactment of this legislation the Federal Government plans to eliminate direct relief and substitute in its place work-relief on substantial projects in each locality where relief needs exist.

"Immediate action is necessary," says Mr. Bland, who proposes prompt selection of desirable projects and adds: "A small, wideawake, 'live-wire' working committee should be selected to push the project selected."

Fredericksburg proper has no public works under the first allocation of funds, the only immediate project in this section being the construction of four new dormitory buildings at the State Teachers College at a cost of $360,000, of which 30 per was an outright grant from the Government.

'Cannon Ball' House Sold in Winchester

Winchester, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). The "Cannon Ball" House, one of the city's landmarks, has been sold by Miss Emma Connor, its former owner. Frank N. and Salome V. McCormick were the purchasers. The consideration was not announced.

The house stands on the northwest corner of Loudoun and Clifford streets. During the Civil War a cannon ball passed entirely through the house. There is a black spot painted on the north wall showing where the ball entered. The ball itself is still imbedded in the south wall.

State Explains $40,000 Item in Road Charges

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.). The apparent error in charging Montgomery County $40,000 for a road apparently built in Pocomoke City was only typographical, and the county is still overdrawn $225,000 in its road fund, the State roads commission yesterday informed Delegate Joseph A. Cantrel.

In its schedule of Montgomery County construction, the commission included $39,800 for shoulders on a street in Pocomoke City. This sum was really spent for improvements to Massachusetts avenue extension, it said yesterday, and is a proper charge against the county.

Prisoners Riot; Protest Meals

Break Windows, Turn On Faucets in Jail in West Virginia.

Huntington, W. Va., Jan. 23 (AP). Protesting against food served them, 78 prisoners in the Cabell County Jail rioted last night, smashing all windows and turning on faucets, flooding the third floor of the building before they were subdued by a barrage of tear gas.

After flooding the cell bloc, the prisoners then attempted to set the jail afire, and repulsed jail attaches with an attack of cups, plates and other utensils.

Safety Director Golden Adkins and Lieut. J. H. Chapman and Andy Baker, of the Huntington police, were sent to the jail and called upon the prisoners to stop the rioting.

"We want good food; bring us food." Was the answering cry.

Tear gas was shot into the cell bloc, "strong-room" of the county jail and the disturbance was quelled.

The trouble started, jail attaches said, after the prisoners were served a supper of beans and bread. Sheriff Ira J. Harshbarger said the food was as good as served in any jail and attributed the outbreak to his abolishment of the prisoners' "kangaroo court."

Man Who Broke Jail for Others Gets in Himself

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—The mystery of the Charles Town City Jail was solved this morning with the arrest of a man named Deevers, a resident of the Middleway, W. Va., neighborhood. Since Christmas several men have been released from the local lockup by some one in possession of a key. Local officers making arrests would place the men in the cells and go back to find the doors open.

The "Good Samaritan" to all the incarcerated prisoners was discovereed when he was placed in the jail charged with drunkenness. As several men passed by his cell, Deever prevailed upon them to open the door with a key, which he passed through the bars. The incident was reported to authorities and investigation showed the key had been fashioned from a 6-penny nail.

Deevers later admitted to Officer Ambrose that he had freed a prisoner Christmas Day and several others two weeks later.

Charles Town Plans For President's Ball

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—The President's ball, sponsored by the Jefferson County Young People's Democratic Club, will be held in the Thomas Jefferson Hotel here January 30, Chairman Merle E. Alger announced today.

A banquet will be held before the dance, with the Jackson Jubilee Singers, radio broadcasting artists, entertaining.

Lily Pons Uses Postoffice Named for Her to Mail 3,000 Cards Calling U. S. Attention to Community.

Lilypons, Md., Jan. 23 (AP).—Lily Pons, the opera star, is putting the postmark of this small Frederick County community to a novel use in sending from here much of her mail.

Miss Pons this week had 3,000 postcards stamped here, advertising a program on which she will appear. The cards were addressed to all parts of the United States and its possessions and to Canada.

This was not the first time the noted singer has used the local postoffice. She mailed her Christmas cards from here last December. At that time she expressed a desire to visit the community some time.

To the cards mailed was a note saying: "This card [illegible] at Lilypons, Md., the only postoffice in the world especially named for an opera singer. Lilypons, Md., is a few miles from the birthplace and burial place of Francis Scott Key, composer of 'The Star-Spangled Banner.' * * *"

The postoffice of Lilypons is near Adamstown, south of Frederick. It is a postal station for fisheries which also operates large lily gardens.

U. S. to Provide Maryland Aid For February

$1,700,000 Allotment Obviates Rush to Vote Relief.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—The Federal Government will supply all the funds Maryland will need for relief during February, Governor Nice was informed today by United States Senator George L. Radcliffe.

Senator Radcliff told the Governor that Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins had agreed to give the State $1,700,000 for next month. This is sufficient to meet the entire relief bill and no State contribution will be needed.

The action of Mr. Hopkins will postpone for a month the deadline by which the Legislature must make plans for relief revenues for the next two years. This deadline was originally set at February 1.

Bills affecting Montgomery and Frederick Counties were among those introduced in the House and Senate today. The Senate, in executive session, confirmed all recess appointments made by former Gov. Albert C. Ritchie and a Republican nomination made by Gov. Harry W. Nice.

Senator Stedman Prescott (Democrat), Montgomery, introduced a bill to divide the appointment of clerks in the county treasurer's office between the treasurer and the county commissioners. The two assistant treasurers and six clerks would be named by the treasurer—additional clerks would be appointed by the commissioners.

Formerly, Senator Prescott pointed out, all appointments were made by the commissioners on recommendation of the treasurer.

Would Repeal Fire Quota.

Delegate Joseph A. Cantrel, Fusion, Montgomery, introduced a bill repealing the present limit of $4,300 on money collected by tax for the Silver Spring Fire Department. Formerly, the county treasurer collected the tax and remitted $4,300 to the fire department. Under this bill he would remit the entire fire tax proceeds, and the department would return any unused funds at the end of the year.

The Frederick bill provides for refunding $35,000 of bonds of Frederick City, saving this city about $1,000 per year in interest.

Urges Hunting Restriction.

The hunting restriction bill for Montgomery County was introduced in the House by Miss Ruth E. Shoemaker (Democrat), Montgomery. It prohibits hunting within 200 feet of a dwelling, barn, or orchard, but does not apply to trapshooting ranges. It also forbids persons under 18 to hunt except in company of an adult.

Senator James B. Latimer (Republican), Calvert, offered a bill to repeal the State law concerning dogs. Enactment of the legislation would eliminate all present dog-license laws.

Landsale G. Sasscer (Democrat), Prince Georges, president of the Senate, today announced the appointment of H. W. Inship Wheatley, jr., as his secretary. Mr. Wheatley, who is president of the Young Democrats Club of Prince Georges, will have charge of the payment of the Senate doorkeepers and other attendants.

Suspect Accused Of Church Attack

Albert Ainsworth Bound Over at Charles Town.

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Albert Ainsworth, the father of six children, who resides near Bolivar, W. Va., was heard before Justice J. Daniel Walker in Charles Town this morning, charged with firing 20 loads from a shot gun at the Bolivar Pentecostal Church last Sunday night while services were in progress. He was held for the next term of the Jefferson County grand jury, in April, under $200 bond. He is still in the county jail here.

Ainsworth was arrested by County Policeman Merle E. Elger, Monday night. The Rev. B. F. Crawford charged that the 80 worshipers, including 30 children, were forced to abandon the church on their hands and knees to escape.

Judge Scores Police Laxity On ABC Law

Failure in Duty Courts Ouster, He Tells County Officials.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). In his charge to the grand jury in corporation court here today Judge Frederick W. Coleman, of the Fifteenth Virginia Judicial District, delivered a warning to county and city officers that they will be held accountable for enforcement of the alcoholic beverage control act.

"There seems to be a general wave of crime over the whole country," Judge Coleman told the grand jury, adding that "many crimes of great magnitude arise directly or indirectly from the violation of the liquor laws."

He referred to the reduction from $10 to $1 in the fee allowed for the arrest and conviction of liquor law offenders, but declared this was no excuse for laxity of enforcement and gave warning that officials were subject to removal from office for wilful neglect of duty.

Duty to Enforce Law, He Says.

Some officers, Judge Coleman said, "have the idea that they are not called upon to enforce this new liquor law," but "it is as much their duty to see that this new liquor law is enforced as any other law upon the statute books."

Judge Coleman said it was essential that trial justices impose proper punishment for those convicted, adding that an "easy" attitude discourages vigilance by an arresting officer.

He severely scored the practice of "bargaining" between Commonwealth's attorneys and defense counsel in agreeing on the punishment of law violators, declaring that "punishment should never be agreed upon in advance, but should always be fixed either by the court or jury from the proof, and not upon any agreement or understanding between the attorneys in the case.

Warns of Other Crimes.

"It is highly important that the alcoholic beverage control act be rigidly enforced. It is the solemn duty of every sheriff, sergeant, constable and police officer to use his efforts to eradicate bootlegging and all other violations of this act.

"If this law is strictly enforced by the officers," he said, "violations, including those who operate cars under the influence of intoxicants, will be reduced to a minimum."

Judge Coleman said that the "law provides that any officer who shall knowingly or wilfully neglect to perform any duty enjoined upon such officer by any law of this State may be removed from office."

Rev. Howard Blake Dies in Hospital

Heart Attack Following Operation Is Fatal.

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 23 (AP).—The Rev. Howard Blake, 37, pastor of the Christian Church at New Cumberland, W. Va., died in a hospital tonight after a minor operation. Death was attributed to heart failure.

Mr. Blake was born and educated in Baltimore. He had held pastorates in Cincinnati, Roanoke, Va., and Pine Bluff, Ark., before coming to Wheeling.

He was chaplain at Virginia Polytechnic Institute at Blackford, Va., for eight years.

Mr. Blake is survived by his widow, two daughters, two sisters and two brothers.

'Joyride' Suspect Goes on Rampage, Damages 3 Cars

Frostburg, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Alexander Densmore, of this place, went on a rampage last night and damaged three automobiles. He is charged with having taken the car of Cecil Engle from in front of his residence on Main street and crashing into cars owned by Miss Gertrude Davis, of Shaft, and Frank Posenel, of Eckhart, which were parked along the curve.

Densmore, who was injured, was placed in Miners' Hospital, where he became violent and it was necessary to put him in a straitjacket. He will be held for observation.

JUDGE FREDERICK W. COLEMAN.

Judge Orders Report on Bell From Hospital

Alleged Wife-Poisoner Faces Second Trial if Declared Sane.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Judge Frederick W. Coleman today took steps to obtain official information concerning the condition of Edward C. Bell, who was committed by him to the Southwestern State Hospital at Marion, Va., in December after a local jury was unable to agree upon a verdict following Bell's trial on a charge of poisoning his wife.

Judge Coleman, in discharging the jury and ordering Bell committed to the institution, fixed no time limit on his stay there pending a report on his sanity. Today, however, he instructed Clerk J. W. Adams, of the Corporation Court here, to ascertain what Bell's condition is at the hospital.

During the trial counsel for Bell, a 60-year-old deacon in the Baptist church here, contended he was irresponsible for his actions because of insanity. Medical experts supported the defense contention from the witness stand.

Should Bell be found insane he will remain at Marion Hospital, but should he be pronounced sane he will be returned here to face another trial.

Jacob N. Barnhouse, 45, Struck While Clearing Snow Off Switches.

Point of Rocks, Md., Jan. 23 (AP). Jacob N. Barnhouse, 45-year-old father of eight children, was killed today by a Baltimore & Ohio Railroad freight engine as he and two other railroad employes were trying to keep the switches free of snow and ice.

Barnhouse died of a fractured skull. Both his legs were broken and he suffered other injuries. Acting Coroner John F. Keller, of Buckeystown, gave a verdict of unavoidable accident.

John Oden, one of the two men working with Barnhouse, was slightly injured.

The crew of three men were using "snow burners," a gas torch, to keep the tracks in the vicinity of switches warm so they would not become clogged.

It was believed that the noise from the torches deadened the sound of the approaching engine, bound with a freight train from Brunswick to Baltimore. It struck Barnhouse as the other two men jumped to safety.

John Chapman Buried In Martinsburg Rites

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 23.—Burial was held here today for John Chapman, native and former resident of Berkeley County, who died Sunday morning at his home in Davis, W. Va.

He is survived by one son, Fredrick Chapman, principal of Widen High School, near Montgomery, W. Va., and two brothers, Charles and David Chapman, this county.

Age Pension Bill Offered In Assembly

Measure Proposing $30 Is Sponsored by Administration.

By Laurance F. Stuntz.
(Post Staff Correspondent.)

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 23.—A bill providing old-age pensions for Maryland at an annual cost of $2,520,000 was introduced in the Senate today by the Administration as the report of Gov. Harry W. Nice's pension committee was made public.

The report points out that it now costs $2,500,000 for the support of aged in poor houses and institutions. The average cost of keeping the aged in institutions is $40 per month, while the pension system would cost only $15 per month.

The bill provides for a pension of not more than $1 per day, and the outside income of the pensioner would be included in this maximum, so that persons with a private income of more than $30 per month would not be eligible.

Age Provision Is 65.

Persons more than 65 years old, who have lived in the State for five years, would be eligible if they meet the following conditions:

That they have not been convicted of a felony within ten years.

That they are not in any correctional institution.

That they have not given away any property to qualify for a pension.

That they have no children able to support them.

But if the children are able to give them partial support, the State will add enough to increase the sum to $30 per month.

The total amount of pensions paid shall be returned to the State from the estate of the pensioner and the State's claim shall be preferred over other claims. The State will not evict a husband or wife of a deceased pensioner from the family home so long as the spouse is not more than 15 years younger and does not remarry.

County Share One Third.

One third of the cost of the pension would be borne by the county or by Baltimore City, which would also pay the administration cost. If any Federal funds are available for pensions, one-third of these funds will go to the counties and the rest to the State.

There are now about 16,000 persons eligible for the pensions in the State, but 2,000 of these are now in institutions. Of the total in cost of the pensions, the State would pay $1,680,000 and the counties and Baltimore City would be assessed $840,000. These sums would not be required for several years, when the peak load would be reached.

Rural Fire Budget Meets Opposition

Hagerstown Commission Hits 'Useless Expense.'

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—The County Commissioners have indicated their opposition to a bill which would give volunteer fire companies in rural districts $750 annually for maintenance.

This opposition was voiced by board members following a conference with representatives of the Washington County Volunteer Firemen's Association and representatives of the county in the General Assembly, at which the indorsement of the board for a bill authorizing such an appropriation was sought.

Such an appropriation would be a burden upon sections of the county not served by county volunteer companies, such as Sandy Hook, Blue Ridge Summit and others, it was claimed. Sandy Hook is served by the Harpers Ferry, W. Va., Fire Company, and the latter by Pennsylvania companies.

Jury Indicts Man Accused In 100 Thefts

Stilwell, Alleged Toothpick Burglar, Named in 15 Bills.

Ernest White, Reputed Bank Robber, Charged Under New Law.

The District grand jury yesterday returned 57 indictments before Justice Oscar R. Luhring in the District Supreme Court. Fifteen of them were against Lonnie L. Stillwell, who was described by police as the "toothpick burglar."

Stillwell, according to testimony offered the grand jury, inserted a toothpick in the lock on front doors of homes he entered. The toothpick acted as a barrier when the owner returned home and attempted to unlock the door, the intruder meantime making his getaway.

More than 100 cases of housebreaking were cleared up with Stillwell's arrest, officials said. Hundreds of dollars' worth of allegedly stolen goods was recovered from a cache. Most of his sorties were said to have been in the Northwest section.

In another indictment the grand jury brought into play a newly enacted statute designed to discourage bank robbery. The law increased sharply the penalty for robbing a member bank of the Federal Reserve System.

Ernest, White Indicted.

The indictment was based on the shooting of Frank La Porte, 60-year-old Riggs National Bank employe, in the Washington Terminal December 17. Ernest N. White, 22 years old, accused of the shooting, allegedly grabbed two bags containing $1,980 in checks and $1,127 in cash. Under the new law the maximum penalty for the offense was raised from 15 to 25 years.

Alleged to have used the "two pounds of onions" ruse in two grocery store hold-ups, William J. Dant and Bernard E. Nichols were named in two true bills. The story told by police was that the pair would enter a store, order the onions and then hold up the proprietor. They were accused of robbing Hyman Lazer and Isaac Dunayer, northeast grocers, who were robbed of $58.

Continuing the campaign against gambling in the District, the jurors named 16 men and women as having transgressed the gaming laws. Most of the indictments named the "numbers racket" as the basis for the charge.

Woman Exonerated.

Those indicted were William and Nicholas Jimroglou, John R. Forte, Peter C. Coyle, Walter G. Bethea, Clark Cummings, Theodore Nichols, Charles Elmer Pinkney, Mary Gibbs, Eva Jane Henderson, Eva Florence Cotton, Elliott D. Rttley, John Kelly, John Howard, Elizabeth Lou Freeman, Frank Partee and William McKay Chichester. Gilbert Falcone and Herman E. Roach were charged with operating an alleged horse race betting establishment.

Mrs. Suzanne M. Ham, wife of William F. Ham, president of the Potomac Electric Power Co., was exonerated of blame in connection with the traffic death of Blanche L. Teal, 60 years old, who was struck by Mrs. Ham's automobile at Connecticut avenue and Calvert street northwest, December 23.

Others indicted were: James Monroe, Leroy Jenkins, William J. Dart, Loy C. Smith, Milton J. Green, Wyatt W. Johnson, Frank Hall, Paul E. Arthur, George W. Curtis, Alphonso Thomas and Alfred Davis, joy-riding; Robert Crawford, Willie Smith, Francis A. Barbee, Cosmas M. Barbee and Timothy J. O'Shea, grand larceny; John Douglas (two charges), Oscar G. Scales, Stanley A. Kidwell, Vincent I. Norgestrom and James W. Kalsic, housebreaking.

Henry W. Mackell, Normal R. Brown and Booker T. Huff, assault with a dangerous weapon; Price W. Runn, Fred S. Minyard, William J. Dant, Bernard E. Nichols, Otie Stinson and Fred Henderson, robbery; Charles T. Keefe, nonsupport; Frederick Redmond, assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge; Brutus Lane and Lucilcus Scott, violation of the liquor taxing act of 1934.

Soviet Posters Show Propaganda Changes

Healthful, Happy Families Instead of Horrible Caricatures of 'Capitalistic Woes' Depicted at Art League Display Here.

Today's Russian is a rosy-cheeked fellow, with large lumpy muscles like the "iron bands" of Longfellow's blacksmith, bright blue eyes and a body glowing with health and happiness.

His wife is equally buxom and merry, and their little Ivan is the ruddy personification of the healthy child.

That's the impression given the visitor to the new exhibit of Soviet propaganda posters, now displayed at the Art League of Washington, 1503 Twenty-first street northwest. The Russian poster artists, less concerned the last few years with the down-with-capitalism motif, now do a great deal of pointing with pride to the achievements of the Commune.

So, whether you can read Russian or not, you can have a lot of clean fun at the exhibit, which was assembled by C. L. Simmering, formerly private secretary to Ambassador Bullitt, the United States envoy to Russia. Mr. Simmering, now attached to the State Department, obtained the posters by hook or crook, according to Charles Val Clear, of the Art League, and loaned them to the league for study purposes.

The propaganda method has changed subtly through the years, with the once somewhat shrill intolerance now mellowed into what appears to be almost an imitation of American advertising methods. The usual appeal now is very like the "you too can have muscles like this" type of copy, with scenes showing the happy worker-consumer surrounded by his collectivist family, with books, good clothes, a glow of health, and even a phonograph, as symbols of the prosperity that comes to the honest toiler.

Some of the posters have been translated, and from these you can learn such arts as the best methods for planting hothouse tomatoes.

That will seem unbelievable to poster-lookers of the past, who have seen the luridly powerful effects used during the Soviet's early years, but reasonable enough if the present educational trends are taken into account. The posters now are often merely instructive, and serve as do our Government's booklet service to farmers.

The posters are inferior in design and color to the modern French work by such men as Jean Carlu or Sepo, or to the pre-Hitler German posters, but they are striking, nevertheless, in their revelation of present-day Soviet attitudes.

More U. S. Cash Sought in Fight On Elm Plague

Landscape Experts Declare Destruction of Nation's Trees Is Threatened.

With thousands of elm trees, infected by the Dutch elm disease, threatened with destruction throughout the Eastern States, the Federal Government must appropriate additional funds to carry on the attempt to halt the rapid spread of the disease, the American Society of Landscape Architects declared in a resolution adopted yesterday in the closing session of their three-day convention in the Mayflower Hotel.

"The funds now set aside to fight the disease will be exhausted in April," states the resolution. "In view of the fact that the elm tree is one of the most important of trees from the standpoint of landscape architecture, we ask the Government to provide further funds to adequately finance the task, which must be carried on throughout the year and into 1936."

The Dutch elm disease, brought here by a shipment of diseased Belgian trees in 1933, can be halted only by destruction of the infected branch of a tree marked with the disease, according to A. D. Taylor, new president of the society. Sprays are ineffectvie, he said, and the one certain method of counteracting the spread of the scourge is by complete destruction of every infected tree.

The society elected Charles F. Gillette, of Richmond, Va., as an additional trustee, and adjourned in the late afternoon after a day spent in technical discussion.

Craft Guild Order Decreed by Reich

Law Will Organize All of Nation's Skilled Labor.

Berlin, Jan. 23 (AP).—The Nazi revolution came to grips with the industrial revolution today as the government moved to recast Germany's twentieth century industry in the molds of the medieval craft guilds.

A new law published in today's official Reichs Gesetzblatt, which takes effect immediately, organizes all the nation's skilled labor into so-called craftmanship chambers similar in their three stages—apprentice, journeyman and master—to the craft guilds of the Middle Ages.

The legislation, deriving like the National Socialists' Aryanism from the party's emphasis on the virtues of the early Germans, provides for operation of the craftmanship chambers on the "leadership" principle, under the supervision of the minister of economics.

Storm Braved By Mrs. Farley To See Trial

'A Bit Disappointed' When Hauptmann Fails to Take the Stand.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 23 (AP). Broadway and Pennsylvania avenue came to Bruno Hauptmann's trial today through the year's worst snowstorm.

Mrs. James A. Farley, wife of the Postmaster General; Lynn Fontanne, actress; Mrs. William Collier, jr., wife of an actor, and Ford Madox Ford, novelist, all were there.

"What a case they have against that man" said the blonde Mrs. Farley, who ate a box lunch in the courthouse and leaned forward all day on the bench in front of her.

Lynn Fontanne powdered her nose with a down puff attached to a gay handkerchief and said, "What drama! What grand theater!

"This Hauptmann is a handsome young man in a dreadful predicament."

Ford, a rugged figure in a tweed coat, a polka dot tie and gray trousers, said at noon, "I have no feeling about Hauptmann at all." But late in the day, as Arthur J. Koehler, wood technologist, testified, he turned to a neighbor and said:

"You know, that man is going to send Hauptmann to the chair. And isn't he self-possessed?"

"I have a strong feeling about this, for I have children of my own," said Mrs. Farley. She had a seat near the front beside two brokers' wives, Mrs. D. H. McKetrick and Mrs. W. P. Post, jr., of New York and Montclair, N. J.

"I am just a bit disappointed," Mrs. Farley said. "I thought Hauptmann would go on the stand today."

Smear, Ex-Whitney Gelding, Triumphs

Rousing Comeback Nets 7-Year-Old Win.

New Orleans, Jan. 23 (AP).—Smear, once a proud bearer of the famous Whitney light blue and brown topped silks, today carried the colors of Mose Goldblatt, veteran trainer and owner, to victory in the 6 furlongs of the Mountain View purse at the Fair Grounds.

Meeting five other sprinters, the 7-year-old gelded son of Mad Hatter ran one of his typical come-from-behind races to take the decision by a length. Andy Pelleteri's Kuvera was second, and A. J. Halliwell's Mueller third.

During the early part of the trip, Smear trailed, but by the time Broadstep, the early pace setter, had reached the half-way mark he was in third place. He moved up to second, a head back, as Mueller took the lead rounding the bend into the stretch and then forged to the front in the run for the judges. Well backed, Smear paid $5.60 straight.

Sleuth-Secretary Here Foils Barefoot Pleader for Aid

Beggar Trudges From Relief Office, Squawks to Group Outside, Grabs a Taxi; Ignores Shoes He'd Left Hidden in the Snow.

A husky man, his face graven with the lines of apparent despair, stood appealingly at the door of the office of Ross Haworth, secretary to Commissioner George E. Allen.

He was shoeless and said he had walked through snowdrifts to beg shoes at the District Building.

Haworth, who would be a first-class detective, if he wasn't a better secretary, scrutinized the man and decided there was something wrong—besides his being without footwear.

The man had appealed to a lady at the emergency relief.

"I have no shoes and my underwear is ragged," he said, as he started to peel off his shirt. The lady relief worker started for the door.

"Here, here, none of that," warned Haworth. "We believe you."

"But we can't give you any help," Haworth added.

At the entrance to the District Building, the man harangued a group. "I suppose I'll have to wait until President Roosevelt gets his works program through before I can get shoes. Until then, I shall have to walk barefooted in the snow."

Haworth still wasn't convinced, so he followed the man a little farther. Less than a block from the building the man hopped into a taxicab.

Then the shoes were found hidden near the Emergency Relief office.

Protest Fails In Alexandria Job Selection

Mayor Lacks Support in Move to Test Court Appointment.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

A resolution offered by Mayor E. C. Davison in the city council meeting Tuesday night, to test the legality of the appointment of a civil and police justice by the judge of the corporation court, to fill an unexpired term, failed for want of support. The mayor read an opinion to the effect that the position should be filled by election, rather than appointment, and his resolution provided that the judge of the corporation court be notified that a vacancy exists and requested to issue a writ calling for an election.

Judge William P. Woolls appointed James Reese Duncan to fill the unexpired term of the late Judge Frederick G. Duvall. Mayor Davison stated that he has received numerous protests, claiming the city charter provides for the filling of such positions by election and questioning the authority of Judge Woolls in the premises.

Councilmen Barley and Cooper objected to the adoption of the mayor's resolution, and Councilman Barley quoted authorities in support of his claim that the appointment was legal, one of his contentions being that the city charter provides for election only of municipal officers, while the civil and police justice and virtually every city official, is a State officer. The mayor stated that the voters believe it is their privilege to elect their own city officials, rather than have vacancies filled by appointment, and have been under the impression that the new city charter, approved in 1932, gives them that right.

The masters and wardens of the Masonic lodges in District No. 1, of Virginia, have formed a permanent masters' and wardens' association and have elected Clyde C. Lamond, jr., master of Alexandria-Washington Lodge, president; William H. Wood, jr., master of Andrew Jackson Lodge, vice president, and Robert L. Eddington, master of Henry Knox Field Lodge, secretary-treasurer.

The Alexandria Kiwanis Club will celebrate today the twentieth anniversary of the founding of Kiwanis. J. Randall Caton, a past president, will be the principal speaker. He will be introduced by Elliott F. Hoffman, program chairman. D. C. Book will explain the anniversary operation of the club.

In anticipation of large returns from the President's birthday ball, to be held January 30, an auditing committee, composed of Purvis Taylor, Roger C. Sullivan and Richard M. Green, has been appointed. The plans for the ball are practically complete. An orchestra, which played at the inaugural ball of President Roosevelt, has been engaged.

President Says Check on Court Is Rein on Him

Roosevelt Speaks Against Norris Plan to Give Senate Control.

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt yesterday injected himself for the second time in the World Court contest, speaking out against the Norris reservation to give the Senate control over questions to be submitted to the tribunal by the United States.

Shorly afterward, Senator Robinson, leading the effort for American adherence to the court, predicted for the first time that he had sufficient votes to ratify the pending protocols and said a final vote might be reached this week.

Opponents, however, also claimed they were gaining strength and said while they were willing to cooperate to shorten debate they did not believe a vote could be had before next week.

White House Curb Protested.

The President's opposition to the reservation of Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, requiring a two-thirds affirmative vote of the Senate for submission of all questions to the court by this country, was expressed at a White House press conference.

He said this was a definite limitation on the constiutional prerogatives of the President in his conduct of the Government's foreign affairs.

He made no comment on the reservation of Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, declaring adherence would not mean our interference in internal affairs of other nations and barring others from taking a hand in purely domestic questions.

To Accept?

This noncommittal attitude of the White House gave strength to the belief the Administration would accept this reservation. The reservation is merely a restatement of the Senate's position of nine years ago and a condition which court proponents claim has been accepted by other signatories.

After Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, had taken issue with his colleague, Senator Reynolds, and urged American adherence, and Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, had read an opposition statement from a Catholic University professor, Senator Robinson yesterday served notice he would seek an agreement today to limit debate or fixing a time for a vote. Johnson said he was willing to cooperate, but thought a vote should go over until next week.

Johnson noted in the statement which he read a reference to Japan's position with regard to the German islands in the Pacific mandated to her by the League of Nations. He observed that, while these islands were given to Japan as a "sacred trust to civilization," charges had been made that she was exploiting them.

"All the world, including the league," he said, "accepts Japan's attitude that she will hold these islands in perpetuity."

Michigan Attorney General Orders Inquiry at Beulah Institution Where 25 Infants Died; Evelyn Frechette's Child Among Them.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 23 (AP).—An investigation was ordered today of an institution at Beulah, Mich., described by Attorney General Harry S. Toy as a "baby farm," where at least 25 babies died, including one born to Evelyn Frechette, once the sweetheart of the late John Dillinger.

Circuit Judge Fred S. Lamb, of Cadillac, Mich., will open the investigation at Beulah tomorrow, the Attorney General said.

Edward L. Brooks, sr., proprietor of the institution, readily admitted today that he had attended the Frechette girl. However, he insisted it was "several years ago and only after a Government agent brought her to my establishment in Chicago and asked me to do it."

The baby lived only a few weeks, he said, dying after he had removed it and the mother to the Beulah farm.

State health department records revealed that a child was born to Evelyn Frechette in Chicago in 1928, but that it died three months later at Beulah and was buried in the "Beulah Cemetery." The name of the father was not given.

Health department authorities also stated that 17 certificates had been found in the files relative to deaths of babies at Beulah and that some of them were signed by Brooks as undertaker.

Brooks said he did not know when he treated the Frechette girl that she was an associate of Dillinger.

"There is spite work behind the charges that my place was a baby farm," he declared. "I have consciously done nothing illegal, and they can go as far as they like with their investigation."

Campbell Sails for U. S. To Set New Records

Southampton, England, Jan. 23 (AP).—Sir Malcolm Campbell sailed for America on the Aquitania today with the bulky, crated Bluebird with which he hopes to hang up new speed records on the sands of Daytona Beach, Fla., within the next few weeks.

He was accompanied by his wife and their daughter, Jean. After a fleeting visit to New York, Sir Malcolm and his party will hurry to Daytona Beach to begin preparations for his speed trials.

Georgetown Prep Beats St. Alban's

Georgetown Prep displayed further indication of fast-improving form yesterday by winning a hard-fought battle from its old rival, St. Alban's, 25 to 24, at Garrett Park.

The victory came after a bitter see-saw fight in which the lead never varied more than a few points. Georgetown Prep led at the half, 12 to 8, but the Saints came back to take 19-17 advantage going into the final quarter.

With less than two minutes to go, Adams gave the Saints a 24-23 lead when he sunk a foul shot, but Lloyd Rice, Georgetown center, scored his fourth basket in the last few seconds of play.

While the game marked a typical renewal of an age-old rivalry between the two schools, it had no bearing on the private school race since St. Alban's had refused to join the league. Rice was the high scorer for the Little Hoyas with 10 points, while Bob Fowler led the Saints with 10.

Pro Tennis Tourney.

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 23 (AP).—Announcement of a professional winter tennis tournament to be held here February 18 to 24 and designed to attract some of the most outstanding players in the game was made today by city officials. No large tournaments have been held here in the past three years.

Expert Declares 'A' Positive Ransom Clew

Dr. Souder Examined 8,000 Samples of Handwriting in Lindbergh Case Before He Arrived at Decision.

The men who sought the kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby sent 8,000 samples of handwriting to Dr. Wilmer Souder, of the Bureau of Standards. In 7,109 times Dr. Souder answered, in effect, "No, you have the wrong man."

Only once he answered, in substance, "Yes, this is the writer of the ransom notes."

There was the German "A" with the peculiar whirl at the top. There were the uncrossed "Ts," the "Ms" and "Ws" that looked like saw teeth. There could be no mistake.

Dr. Souder is a handwriting expert. He sits long hours in a sometimes overheated office poring over copybook letters, hundreds of thousands of handwriting specimens. Almost literally he sets the noose for the hangman. He presses the button in the death house chair. He determines the length of convicts' sentences. He sets men free. Since 1925 he has participated in more than 1,000 criminal cases.

"Actually, we have lost only one case," he said.

Says One Wrote Notes.

Dr. Souder is positive only one man could have written the Lindbergh ransom notes. That is a matter of record in the Flemington, N. J., courthouse, where Bruno Richard Hauptman is on trial for his life.

Write your name for Dr. Souder. He'll tell you in what years you went to grammar school, for handwriting styles, like hats, change. And after he has you dated, he'll pick out four or five characteristics that are what he calls "departures from standard"—the Hauptmann "Ms," for example.

Then he'll average the probability of all these characteristics occurring in the writing of others, and before he is through Dr. Souder will have proved that only one person out of 50,000,000—that's virtually all of the United States literates—could possibly sign your name exactly as you do.

In analyzing handwriting, Dr. Souder separates characteristic letters from the text and copies them, hundreds of times, until they seem to the unpracticed eye to be perfect. Yet Dr. Souder might photostat the copies and originals, shuffle them all up and from letters of the suspect pick his own.

Research Unit For Railroads Is Named Here

Association Board Plans to Reduce Expenses, Increase Income.

Creation of a research advisory board to suggest plans for increasing the income of the Nation's railroads and lessening the outgo was announced yesterday by J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads.

Members of the board, who will assist in the organization of a new department of planning and research within the association, are:

Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution of Washington.

Dr. A. A. Potter, dean of the Purdue University engineering school at Lafayette, Ind.

Meeting here yesterday, the board selected Lawrence W. Wallace, vice president of the W. S. Lee Engineering Corporation of Washington, as director of equipment research. Mr. Wallace will be in charge of all research work relating to motive power and car equipment.

"Rail managements hope that through the department of research and planning still other improvements in operation and service can be brought about," Mr. Pelley said.

Meantime, R. V. Fletcher, general counsel of the railroad association, declared in an address at San Francisco that proposals of organized railroad labor, if enacted into legislation, would increase operating expenses $1,250,000,000 annually.

Such legislation, he declared, would wreck the railroads. He was referring to the program recently announced by the Railway Labor Executive Association, which proposed, among other things, establishment of a six-hour day without a cut in wages.

Noblett's Trial Set On Murder Charge

Will Face Court March 7 at Fredericksburg.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 23 (AP).—Trial of Paul Noblett, 26-year-old amateur boxer, indicted today for the murder of John M. Sinclair, CCC camp member, has been set for March 7.

Arraigned before Judge Frederick W. Coleman after his indictment, Noblett entered a plea of not guilty to the charge, which grew out of Sinclair's death of a broken neck Sunday night. Officers were told that Noblett and William Calhoun sought out Sinclair and L. H. McGhee, accusing the latter CCC men of accosting Calhoun's sister on the street. Blows were passed and Calhoun drove to police headquarters with his apparently unconscious companion, who then was found to be dead.

89-119 Are Employable In Virwginia Says Peery

Richmond, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). There are 89,119 persons in Virginia now employable, but not gainfully employed, Gov. Peery said today on the basis of figures collected for the information of the Federal Government.

The estimate embraces persons between the ages of 16 and 65, exclusive of housewives, students and others not ordinarily employed, and incudes persons available for employment who never have obtained work as well as persons out of work.

Sno(w) Use Attempting to Get Anywhere With This Debate

Statisticians for No Apparent Reason and With Less Apparent Success Try to Figure Out How Much Has Fallen on Our Streets.

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

Several statisticians, for no apparent reason, attempted yesterday to reach some definite conclusion as to the exact amount of snow which fell in the District between daylight and dark. They were quite unsuccessful, mostly because of the automobiles.

It seems that the snow estimators were getting along famously on the theory that if 8½ inches of snow had fallen between certain hours over the 100 square miles in the original District area, then all they had to do was to break down 100 square miles into inches and multiply the fall then by 8½, a mere childlike problem.

But as they got into the subject they found several complications, and it looked as if they were getting nowhere when one of the brighter members of the snowstorm brain trust suddenly remembered that Herr Doktor Einstein was staying at the Mayflower, but it turned out to be Max Rabinoff, of Traviata Opera Company, so they gave up that idea.

They were especially anxious to determine how much of the snow that did fall actually landed in the streets. Seems that the Street Cleaning Department figured it out that there were 230 miles, linear miles, of streets encumbent upon them to clear. But in order to figure right each street has to be multiplied by two, because street cleaners clean only one side of the street at a time. (They clean the left side first, always, as that makes it harder on traffic, but that's beside the point, if any.)

A Futile Conference.

Having arrived at the figure of 230, the estimators, who happened to be holding their annual conference on the Causes and Cures of All Conferences at the taproom of the Hotel Washington, got very little farther. Miss Winifred Mallon, who was covering the convention for the New York Times, said that the convention would get about as far as any convention ever did, and she guessed she'd be getting along home.

"Provided that all things are equal * * *" commenced the chairman, but he got little beyond that as one of the older members wanted proof.

However, after several round-table conferences had been held, it was agreed upon that if there were 230 actual miles on Washington streets, then all that was necessary was to multiply 73,560, which someone said was the number of inches in a mile, by 230, thus arriving at the length in inches, which if multiplied by the depth, or 8½ inches, would give a rough estimate of the amount of snow most of the convention would probably traverse before they got home.

A Dark Stranger.

It was at this moment that a tall, dark stranger, who hadn't been invited in the first place, arose and threw the first monkey wrench.

"If," he said, clearing an expansive throat, "you do that, which you won't, you still won't get anywhere. How wide are those streets?"

The delegate from Iowa was despatched to measure the width of the streets. A late message said he was stretching himself from end to end across Constitution avenue and the police were momentarily expected to interfere.

It was then that the delegate from Rhode Island, of all places, looked down his lean nose and said with the faint suspicion of a sneer, "And what of the automobiles?"

It was later found out that what he had in mind was that, because of all these thousands of automobiles parked in Washington streets, all of which carried about a foot of snow on their roofs, no exact estimate could be reached, even if the delegate from Iowa had come back. For all this snow on auto roofs would be carried somewhere else, whenever the automobile moved, and surely you couldn't charge up snow that fell on a car parked up on Twelfth street if it were carted off, say to Silver Spring or even to Alexandria. Or, if possible, vice versa.

Shortly thereafter the convention broke, or rather, was broken up. "'Sno(w) use trying to get anywhere with these guys," said the chairman, as the crowd melted away.

Aid for Blind By Congress Asked in Bill

Measure Calls for $75,000 Pensions for Afflicted.

Benefits Would Apply to About 200 in Washington.

Pensions for the needy blind of Washington are asked in a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania. The bill, which was referred to the House District Committee, was the subject of hearings during the Seventy-third Congress, but died with adjournment. The measure calls for an appropriation of $75,000 to furnish the pensions. Administration of the fund would be in the hands of the Board of Public Welfare, which would decide the benefits in each case.

Residents of Washington whose blindness originated here and blind persons who have been living in the District for five years or more would be eligible to the pension. It is estimated that about 200 persons would benefit under the act.

The House District Committee meeting, scheduled for yesterday morning, drew but three members and no business was transacted because Chairman Mary T. Norton is out of the city. The committee has several important bills before it, but as yet no hearings have been set by the sub-committees to which the bills were assigned.

A bill to regulate barbers in the District by licensing them was reintroduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Laborite), Minnesota. It was referred to the Senate District Committee.

Applicants for licenses would be required to take a written examination and would have to serve under a registered barber as an apprentice before obtaining the permit. Barbers who have practiced a year prior to passage of the bill would be entitled to a registration certificate without examination, however.

New Air Service Starts Tomorrow

Express and Local Flights on New Orleans Line.

A fast new 14-passenger Douglas plane is scheduled to take off at 2:11 a. m. tomorrow at Washington Airport as the Eastern Air Lines opens an aerial express service to New Orleans. The schedule provides for but one intermediate stop, Atlanta, with arrival in New Orleans at 7:57 a. m. (Central time).

The service will include a day flight also, with 15-passenger Curtiss Condor planes which are to leave Washington at 10 a. m., to arrive in New Orleans at 7:39 p m. (Central time), after stops at Richmond, Greensboro, Charlotte, Spartanburg, Atlanta, Birmingham, Montgomery and Mobile.

The Douglas planes are the same type recently used by Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker when he broke the flight record from New Orleans to New York by making the trip in seven hours and four minutes.

Annapolis Burial For Lieut. Reeves

Military Honors Accorded Victi mof Plane Crash.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Six young officers of the Navy Aviation Corps today bore to the Naval Cemetery here the body of Lieut. William C. Reeves, flier, killed in a crash on the West Coast two weeks ago.

Lieut. Reeves was the son of Rear Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, commander in chief of the United States Fleet, who attended services, conducted by Commander William N. Thomas, chaplain of the Naval Academy.

A company of Marines and the Academy Band formed a military escort. A firing squad fired three volleys and a trumpeter sounded "Taps" over the grave.

The following served as pallbearers: Lieuts. Walter H. Albach, Henry H. Caldwell, Thomas J. Hamilton, Harry R. Horney, Hilton C. Owen and William S. Pye, jr.

D. A. R. Chapter Picks Conference Delegates

The Brig. Gen. Rezin Beall Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution held its monthly meeting yesterday at the residence of Mrs. Lawrence V. Coleman in Chevy Chase, Md.

Delegates to the State conference on March 13 and 14 in Baltimore were elected. Those chosen were Mrs. W. E. Northam, State regent, of Baltimore; Mrs. G. W. S. Musgrave, of Laurel, president of the Prince Georges County Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Irving Miller, of Beltsville.

Alternates elected were Mrs. B. F. Wade, of College Heights; Mrs. Robert Hope Williams, of Baltimore, and Miss Molly Hall, of Beltsville.

Women Democrats to Meet.

The Women's Democratic Club of the Seventeenth District, Prince Georges County, will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in the Chillum District Democratic Clubhouse, Thirty-fourth street and Rhode Island avenue, Mount Rainier. President Daisy LaCoppidan will preside.

Card Party at Mount Rainier.

Moratorium On Ducks Rejected

Game Group Defeats Proposal; Would Let U. S. Fix Season.

Biological Survey Head Would Decide Dates, Under Plan.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23 (AP).—Voting down a proposal to declare a one-year moratorium on duck shooting in the United States, the twenty-first American Game Conference, closing a three-day meeting, today passed a resolution leaving final determination of the length of the 1935 season to the United States Bureau of Biological Survey.

The resolution, offered by Col. Arthur F. Foran, president of the More Game Birds Foundation, acting chairman of the resolutions committee, precipitated a sharp clash between John Baker, executive director of the National Association of Audubon Societies—proponent of a one-year ban beginning September, 1935—and opponents of the move.

Cites Previous Vote.

In an animated speech, Col. Foran revealed that, as a member of the resolutions committee, Baker yesterday withdrew the Audubon Societies' proposal to close the season and joined in a unanimous vote for the resolution intrusting the responsibility to J. N. (Ding) Darling's survey bureau for recommendation to the conference.

This development, after Baker's renewed attempt in quest of closing the season to enable repopulation of rapidly diminishing diving ducks, brought a storm of opposition from the floor directed at Baker. Finally Baker's proposal was put to a vote and defeated, by an almost 2 to 1 majority, and the committee's resolution was passed without a dissenting vote.

Text of Resolution.

"Resolved—That the American Game Conference hereby records its unqualified approval of the efforts of the present chief of the United States Biological Survey and pledges its utmost confidence and support of such regulations as may be recommended by him for the shooting of wild water fowl during the 1935 season."

The conference also passed a resolution petitioning Congress to appropriate sufficient funds to be made available to the biological bureau to provide adequate enforcement of all laws and regulations relating to migratory birds.

Still another resolution asked President Roosevelt that "all renewable resources of the country be placed under the control of a single governmental agency headed by a man whose record shows him to be familiar with the facts and problems involved with renewable resources."

Voices Darling's Plea.

This latter resolution is in line wth the appeal made yesterday by Darling for a national game policy and a Federal commission for the conservation of wild-life resources.

At the conclusion of the conference Aldo Leopold, professor of game management of the University of Wisconsin, was elected chairman of the conference for 1935-36, succeeding Hoyes Lloyd, supervisor of wild-life protection in Canada.

A resolution attacking Federal regulation G-20-A, giving the United States Government control of wild life on Federal areas, was tabled after opposition was successfully led by William C. Adams, director of the New York State game and fish conservation department.

Don McCallister, Toledo, Named Gamecock Coach

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—The board of trustees of the University of South Carolina met yesterday and formally elected Don McCallister, of Toledo, Ohio, head coach of athletics at the university.

McCallister will be given a 23-month contract beginning February 1, and expiring December 31, 1936.

Navy Five Toys With Terrors On Court

Middies Use 17 Players in 55-20 Victory Over Western Maryland.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Western Maryland College made such a woefully weak showing on the basket ball court here today that all 17 players of the Navy squad worked out in course of the fray, and easily piled up a score of 55 to 20, Navy's highest total of the current campaign.

Johnny Wilson, Navy coach, put his second-string combination on the floor to start hostilities, and it functioned in such fine fashion there was no need for replacements. This group took the lead at the outset, held command, and at the end of 17 minutes of play, had run up a score of 19 to 8. Third stringers finished the half, when the scoring figures read, Navy, 21; Western Maryland, 19.

Bill Shepherd Outclassed.

Capt. Buzz Borries and his varsity mates went into action at the opening of the second half and literally toyed with the Green Terrors.

Bill Shepherd, of football fame at the up-State institution, undoubtedly deserves all of the good things said about his prowess on the gridiron, but as a basket ball guard he was completely outclassed. Shepherd worked against Dusty Dornin, Navy forward, also a football player. The Middy had things so much his own way that he rolled up almost a point a minute, for with Borries and the other regulars, he retired after 16 minutes of play. At this stage Navy had widened the gap to 53 to 15. Third and fourth string players finished the game, and, at the expense of these, the Terrors reduced the margin by 3 points.

'Mental Stance' Vital Factor in Athletics

(The fifth of a series of exclusive articles on the training and conditioning of athletes by the man who trained Jim Bausch and Glenn Cunningham when they won the Sullivan Award and who now trains the Boston Red Sox Baseball Club and the George Washington football and basket ball teams.)

Psychology in Athletics.
By Roland Logan.

THE mental condition or the "mental stance" of an individual athlete or a squad is probably the most important factor in a team's success.

The "mental stance" as psychologists call it is a condition with which a trainer must be familiar if he or the team is to enjoy high place in the win column.

Proper mental stance can "make" a team as improper mental stance can break one.

An individual athlete must have confidence though not too much of it. He must possess what trainers and coaches call "edge" just before the game, but not to the cracking point.

The coach and trainer must visualize the contest prior to its start, but not to the breaking point of fear and worry.

These and many other factors form the psychological background in athletics.

One of the psychological problems in athletics is the "keying up" of a team before a game. This is something of a science in its successful execution.

The "Pep" Talk.

Some athletes can't take a "pep talk." That type of athlete needs the most careful attention from the coach or trainer. Usually he is of the nervous and emotional type and spends his energy needlessly before the contest begins. The opposite type requires a prodding or a bit of eloquently emotional talk.

The close, friendly relationship between the player and trainer is the part I like best about athletics. Player and trainer quickly come to know each other intimately in the training room. In knowing the athlete the trainer learns his strong and weak points, both with respect to character and physical make-up. This information is invaluable to a trainer.

Just how much keying up or building of metnal stance is necessary is a problem in itself. In determining the proper degree of effort along this line such things must be considered as alumni influence, rivalry, politics, love, classroom standing, etc.

Defeats Often Beneficial.

A string of defeats at the hands of powerful and respected opposition will often cause the oft-defeated team to stage a successful comeback.

An example of this favorable reaction was the victory the George Washington University basket ball team scored recently over City College of New York. Several members of the Colonial team had played twice unsuccessfully against C. C., N. Y., considered one of the greatest college basket ball teams in the Nation.

These Colonial players acquired without pressure of any sort a feeling of proper mental stance just before the game this year. Their feeling spread to the other members of the squad. Confidence of the proper sort was written on the faces of the entire squad, so plainly that I saw no need for a "pep talk." They were actually keying up themselves as the game neared. All they wanted was a chance to play. This came to them in due time and they won by sheer fight and determination, products of mental stance.

Rockne Master Psychologist.

Knute Rockne was a master psychologist in athletics. He knew in detail the traits and characteristics of every man who played under him. As a result all of his teams were emotionally controled. He got the most out of them in point of effort by varying his tactics to meet conditions as they arose.

On one occasion Rockne simply uttreded one sarcastic phrase to arouse his players to 100 per cent performance. The story was told me by Larry Mullins, a former Notre Dame athlete, with whom I was associated at the University of Kansas.

Notre Dame, before one of its games with Army, was over-confident. The Irish had become used to winning over the Army and regarded this contest as a victory in the bag. As always, the over-confident team suffered in effectiveness and at half-time Army was laeding.

Into the dressing room stumbled a disillusioned Notre Dame team, there to await a typical Rockne pep talk. The Irish fully realized that they had been playing poorly, due to improper mental attitude. But Rockne did not appear. At least, "Rock" waited until just before the time came to return to the field, and then he merely stuck his head in the door, hissed "Fighting Irish! Bah!" and slammed the portal in their faces. This had a magical effect upon the players, and they went back to outplay the Cadets by a good margin, winning the ball game.

Tennis Movie Plan Stirs French Body

County Hopes to Bar Perry From Films.

Paris, Jan. 23 (U.P.).—Pierre Gildou, president of the French Lawn Tennis Association, said today his organization will fight the change in rules proposed by Czechoslovakia, backed by Great Britain, to permit amateurs to appear in motion pictures for pay.

"The change would favor one man and one country, Fred Perry and England," Gildou said. "The international federation was hostile to any such amendments at the last meeting and there is no reason for a change of attitude when the next meeting is held here in March.

The proposed rule change is expected to be the major issue at the next session. The United States is among the nations opposed to the change, while England is determined to make a stand for lossening up the rules, in hopes of forestalling change in Perry's status to professionalism, which would take him off the Davis Cup team and out of other international play.

Storm Causes Cancelling Of Md.-Hopkins G ame

The combined basket ball forces of Maryland and Johns Hopkins lost a decision to yesterday's young blizzard, which caused their game scheduled at College Park to be canceled. Both teams gained by the move as Hopkins was spared an uncomfortable trip from Baltimore and the Terrapins had more time to spend cramming for examinations which begin today.

The game will not be played later as the schedules of both teams have about as many games as they can bear without undue strain on the players. A second game between them is scheduled for February 26 at Baltimore, but Maryland officials last night said it would be shifted to College Park.

Boxing Planned For Schools In Virginia

Red Hill, Meriweather Lewis, Cozet Engage 17 Matches.

CHARIOTTESVILLE, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—An innovation in rural school athletics has been introduced in Virginia with the announcement by A. L. Bennett, superintendent of the Albemarle County public schools, of a boxing schedule of 12 meets to be staged between now and the middle of March by the Red Hill, Meriwether Lewis, Greenwood and Crozet schools.

Boxing has been as popular in the Albemarle schools as it has been at the University of Virginia, but this is the first time that so pretentious a schedule has been arranged.

The pupils have been divided into weights from 50 pounds upward and will be matched within a few pounds of each other.

"We are endeavoring," Supt. Bennett stated, "to make the best possible sport of the manly art of self-defense. Trained officials will be used. Bouts will be stopped to avoid possible injury, because we are more concerned with boxing than with knockouts. No pupil is being allowed to represent his school without the written permission of his parents."

Each meet will conssit of ten matches of three rounds each, the first two being two minutes and the third one minute in length.

The schedule follows:

February 6, Greenwood vs. Meriwether Lewis, at Meriwether Lewis; 7, Crozet vs. Red Mill, at Red Mill; 14, Meriwether Lewis vs. Crozet, at Crozet; 16, Red Hill vs. Greenwood, at Greenwood; 19, Meriwether Lewis vs. Greenwood, at Greenwood; 20, Red Hill vs. Crozet, at Crozet; 27, Red Hill vs. Meriwether Lewis, at Meriwether Lewis; 28, Crozet vs. Greenwood, at Greenwood.

4 Virginia Boxers Are on Dean's List

University, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Four members of Virginia's varsity boxing squad have won places on the "Dean's List of Distinguished Students" for the first term of the 1934-35 session.

Bosher, who won his "V" in the 135-pound class last winter, was the leading student in the college and made the highest average throughout the year. Last fall he was awarded the "Certificate of Intermediate Honors" by President John Lloyd Newcomb for his fine work during his first two sessions in the university.

Net Amateurs Beholden to Czechs

Started Move to Permit Income From Films Despite Rules.

England Eagerly Lends Aid as Pros Entice Perry, Austin.

LONDON, Jan. 22 (AP).—All because Roderick Menzel, of Czechoslovakia, is a big fellow who combs his hair between games and would look very handsome in the movies, a blow has been struck for amateur tennis which has developed world reverberations.

But for the fact that Menzel, the Davis Cup star, aspired to make a little pocket money by appearing in a series of action films, Czechoslovakia's tennis association never would have started a movement to have the rule banning such activity rescinded.

And if the Czechs hadn't made the first move in that direction, the powerful British Lawn Tennis Association never would have had the spunk to support it, much as its members might have yearned to do so. Somebody might have accused them of acting through selfish motives—making an obvious effort to keep their most valuable star, Fred Perry, from turning professional—and that would never have done.

Perry Made Plans at Home.

Perry, they knew (although it was supposed to have been kept a dark secret) had made a series of action films here before leaving on his tour of America and Australia. Bill Tilden, the most ardent of the pros, had given a running commentary on Perry's footwork, etc. If that film ever were released, they realized, Fred would from that moment belong to the money clan and cease to be a valuable asset of the B. L. T. A. and Wimbledon, Inc.

It is not difficult, then, to picture the joy of the British association when it received a letter from the Czechs, saying that at the next general meeting of the International Federation at Paris in March they would introduce a resolution to rescind that section of rule 23 which prohibits amateur tennis players, and particularly Menzel, from making movies.

Sir Samuel Hoare, president of the British association, called a meeting almost instanter. He was greeted by a full house, the word having got around that the dear Czechs needed moral support.

"Views" Have Changed.

H. Roper Barrett, captain of England's Davis Cup team and chairman of the meeting, paused only to hang up his hat before proposing that England's delegation to the Paris meeting support their dear colleagues, the Czechs, right up to the hilt. Present-day views on the question of amateur status, he urged, are not those of the time when the rules were formulated.

There was no need for a second to the motion. Fifty-seven out of the 61 members present were on their feet before Barrett could sit down.

It will be necessary at the regular Paris meeting to call an "extraordinary session" for the purpose of voting to rescind the rule, but that should be easy. The "extraordinary session" can be held the next day.

Must Forestall Pros.

It is anticipated here that the vote to make potential movie stars out of all the tennis boys and girls will be virtually unanimous. No other country needs to have the rule erased quite as urgently as England (and, of course, Czechoslovakia), but the time has come for amateur tennis to hang together. The pros are at the battlements.

The move almost surely will save Perry from going over to the enemy, as he had planned to do after the next Davis Cup matches, as well as his teammate, Bunny Austin.

Shamrock Club Elects Nine New Directors

Woodstock, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Nine men were elected here today to serve as directors of the Shamrock Athletic Club for one year, having been chosen by ballot by more than 90 members. The directors will elect a president, vice president and secretary-treasurer.

A boxing and wrestling show will be held here in the near future the board announced. The card will be made up of local athletes.

Those named to the board are: W. O. Riley, J. V. Bauserman, Douglas Dymock, Clarence Golloday, J. Grove Kniehley, Simon Wender, Paul Dellinger, Charles Yates and Boyd Ramey.

Charles Town's Defeat Provides League Upset

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—The standing of the teams in the Eastern Panhandle Athletic League are considerably jumbled following last week's games. Charles Town High was the victim of the greatest upset to date when it lost by 1 point to the Paw Paw High. Charles Town and Paw Paw are tied for the league leadership.

The standings of both boys and girls follow.

BARNEY ROSS.

G. W. to Honor 7 Former Captains

Tribute Will Be Paid to Ex-Grid Leaders at Monday's Banquet.

SEVEN former George Washington football captains, a trifle plumper than when they sported the Buff and Blue, will be guests of honor Monday night at the annual G. W. athletic banquet. The list reaches back to 1920 when Harry Hawley was field leader, and comes up to last season when Lee Carlin led the Colonials into battle.

Probably one of the best remembered is Dave Alshouse who captained the famous "Ironmen" of 1927 when Maude Crum coached the downtown eleven. Alshouse, an end, helped write football history in his final year when George Washington, a young upstart in bearded company, lost only one game, to Penn State, by a 3-0 margin.

Others who are to be honored are Guy Hottel, '24; Jack Slaughter, '25, Walter Sommers, '28, and Steele McGrew, '29.

Features of the banquet include an award to the most valuable player on the 1934 squad, announcement of the complete 1935 football schedule, and election of captain. Those eligible for the captaincy are Tuffy Leemans, Ben Plotnicki, Arnold Benefield, Red Rathjen, Harry Deming and Sid Kolker.

Gymnasium Available.

Any team desiring to use the Central High Boys' Club gymnasium next Monday between 7:30 and 8:30 p. m., call F. W. Willcutt, National 3800, branch 256.

Baers in Two Supporting Bouts

Joe Knight-Shucco Also on Card; Crowd of 20,000 Expected.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 23 (AP).—Only a now or rain storm will prevent Barney Ross, champion of the lightweights, from meeting Frankie Klick, the California challenger, for Ross' synthetic junior welterweight title in Miami Stadium tomorrow night, the promoters announced today.

The promoters were unperturbed by the unusual weather upstate and a declining thermometer here. They said they had been promised by none less than the United States Government, a clear, probably warm night and anyhow, "mere chilliness" would not be permitted to interfere.

20,000 Seats Available.

Meantime, the advance sale proceeded heartily, they reported. The last of the 20,000 seats was in place and arrangements completed to handle up to 10,000 big and little motor cars.

Ross and the young challenger went through final light exercises today. Ross weighed 138, Klick 133.

Bernet David Rasofky, better known to the Nation as Ross, was a slightly better than even money favorite tonight. If he loses to Klick, he will stall have his lightweight title.

All the other principals down to the first preliminary boys were pronounced in fighting trim by their trainers, including:

Max's brother, Buddy, who will try to flatten Frank Davenport, of Chicago, in six rounds.

Nevers and Wife Hurt In Coast Auto Crash

San Francisco, Jan. 23 (AP).—Ernie Nevers, Stanford assistant football coach and former all-American fullback for the Indians, and his wife were injured today in a head-on-collision on the Bayshore Highway a few miles south of this city. Nevers was cut and bruised. His wife suffered a possible shoulder fracture.

Pitt Stadium Financing Calls For $106,000 Yearly Interest

(Note—So much rumor has been associated with the operation of the famous Pitt Stadium, particularly as to the financial set-up and high-pressure football methods employed, that the Associated Press asked University of Pittsburgh athletic authorities to clarify the picture. Herewith is the response.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 23 (AP).—Over a period of hectic athletic years it has been the habit in collegiate circles to classify the huge Pitt Stadium either as a financial "white elephant" or simply a monumental reminder of the "golden era" of American football.

On the word of the man who should know most about it, W. Don Harrison, director of athletics at the University of Pittsburgh, it is neither. But he reveals that $108,600 is needed annually to pay the interest on the stadium bonds.

Cites Stadium Benefits.

"In the first place," Harrison explains, "the Pitt Stadium is an integral part of the educational facilities of the University of Pittsburgh. Not only that, but it is the support of all the undergraduate athletic training, a program involving the physical well-being of hundreds aside from the varsity football squad.

"The stadium is not controlled by banks—an illusion which grew out of the supposition that it was too much for us to handle. The fact is that the bonds are held by 1,647 individuals, estates, corporations and banks. Thirty-two banks in the Pittsburgh district hold only $290,000 of the total of $1,810,000. The largest single bank holding is $50,000. Only four banks of the 32 hold in excess of $10,000 each.

Bonds Never Defaulted.

"The rest are in the hands of the people. The bonds are one of the best investments in the Pittsburgh district. They have survived the panic without default of the 6 per cent interest. The stadium has never been refinanced to obtain a lower interest charge, the university trustees considering that the obligation to maintain the rate is a moral one.

"Some uninformed critics have taken us to task for not broadcasting our big football games. The reason is that every dollar we lose by encouraging people to stay at home and listen to the games is a dollar needed by the students of this university and owed to the people who lent the money to build the stadium."

15,000 See Slap Dash Beat Larranga in Nose Finish at Hialeah

Fans Protest Decision of Judges

Jockey Watson Rides 3 Smallman Horses to Victory.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Writer).

HIALEAH PARK RACE TRACK, Jan. 23.—It was October in January here in the sunny Southland this afternoon, but one of the hottest finishes of the meeting served to warm the blood of the 15,000 present. Slapdash, earning his oats as a member of the Wheatley Stable, and Larranaga, winner of the Cuban Handicap, provided a nose finish that left the placing to the judges. They called Slapdash the winner and a majority of the fans called them something else.

However, all agreed that they had witnessed a hoss race, and that both horses and jockeys had given their all. Bold Lover, from E. R. Bradley's Stable, was third in the field of seven accepting the issue over the 6-furlong course. Slapdash ran the route in the ordinary time of 1:12 2-5, and paid a substantial $27.50 mutuel.

Slap Dash Off Slowly.

Jockey F. Horn, on Slap Dash, had only one horse beaten going along the back stretch as Larranaga, with E. Arcaro up, held fourth place behind the battle for the lead in which Ladfield, Brannon and Bold Lover figured. Neither horse made a move until the stretch was reached. Slap Dash put on a rush that carried him to the outside of the leaders and he appeared an easy winner at the sixteenth pole. However, Larranaga closed stoutly under Arcaro's urging and just missed getting the verdict.

A northwest wind crossed the course and sent the red flamingoes into a huddle in the infield lake. Natives wore their linen suits but the visitors turned to more substantial clothes and a few wore top coats unashamed.

Favorites Stage Parade.

Favorites paraded to victory in the first three races. The opener went to James City, the property of Mrs. George D. Widener, whose brother-in-law bosses this race track. The son of St. James was tardy on the getaway but came up on the outside with a burst of speed that decided the issue in the last sixteenth. Higher Cloud and Grog, prominent from the start, were second and third. The winner paid $3.50.

The combination of Jockey Bobby Watson, Owner J. E. Smallman and Trainer George Alexandria accounted for the second and third races. Quickly made a strong finish to annex the second from Jirasol II, a grey horse with one M. Villena in the saddle.

Luxuro was third. Desert Call, well played, quit when the real test came.

Band Wagon Beaten Again.

Chester Bild, the Washington, D. C., bowler and turfman, saw his Band Wagon beaten again in the third race, Golden Fate barely hurling his lead to the wire as the Capital-owned horse closed fast. Changeling showed in the field of 12. Trey, the early pace setter, faded approaching the stretch turn.

Howard, ridden by Georgie Watson, was an easy winner of the fifth race, but it remained for Elwawa to show up the field in the sixth. With the unfashionable Jockey Manifold aboard, Elwawa opened up a five-length lead and coasted to the wire.

Sunchance took the seventh at $11.60, outrunning Transport in the stretch. Gifted Lady, the favorite, was third after a rough trip.

The R. Watson-Smallman-Alexandria combination scored its third success of the day when Bushman won the finale from Cousin George and Tuffy G.

Washington College Respects Loyolas

Maryland Loop Leaders Face Test Saturday.

Chestertown, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.). With three victories in the Maryland Intercollegiate Basket Ball Association to its credit, Washington College will face the crucial test Saturday night when Loyola College will be met in Baltimore.

Though Washington is leading the loop and has defeated the title holders, Western Maryland, as well as Mount St. Mary's and Johns Hopkins, Coach J. Tom Kibler will take no chances against his traditional rival since some of the fiercest cage tilts the Maroon and Black has encountered in past years, and not always the victor, have been with the Evergreen lads.

Horowitz, at forward, is keeping up his good work as is Salters, with Skipp at center, and it is likely these will see action Saturday. Huffman, Wilmot and Ward are choices for guard, though it has not been decided which two will open the fray.

Bilancioni at guard and McLain at center may see service before the game wanes, it was believed here today. Kibler has an entire and well-drilled second-string team for use if the occasion demands.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAMES CITY, $3.60, $2.80, $2.50; GROG, $9.70, $5.50; HIGHER CLOUD, $3.20.

JAMES CITY was a bit slow at the break, but closed gamely in the middle of the track, caught GROG at the sixteenth pole, and won going away. GROG showing sudden speed, ran into early lead, but weakened in last 100 yards. HIGHER CLOUD ran straight on inside. TOP TAX was swerving in at the finish.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. The Helpful. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:46. Off at 2:53½. Winner, J. E. Smallman's blk. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—QUICKLY, $5.80, $3.70, $2.90; JIRASOL II, $7.60, $5.60; LUXURO, $3.60.

QUICKLY, mean at the gate, was placed on outside, broke fast, but was allowed back of the pace, came around field entering stretch and, closing gamely, won going away. JIRASOL II, under poor handling, closed a big gap and ran a good race. LUXURO, displaying great speed, followed pace closely and held on gamely. DESERT CALL set a fast pace for half a mile, then tired.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 3:18. Off at 3:24. Winner, J. E. Smallman's b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN FATE, $7.50, $4.50, $3.90; BAND WAGON, $6.90, $6.10; CHANGELING, $11.30.

GOLDEN FATE was sent to the front with a rush and, rated along, held on gamely. BAND WAGON was pinched back just after the start, recovered, and closed very fast. CHANGELING broke slow, went up very fast, and finished with a rush. CATHOP was hard ridden all the way. TRACTABLE ran away below his true form. He was kept on the outside of the field all the way and tired badly.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. The Vero Beach Handicap. Purse, $1,500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:50. Off at 3:52½. Winner, Wheatley Stable's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SLAPDASH, $27.50, $9.30, $4.10; LARRANAGA, $3.70, $2.70; BOLD LOVER, $3.50.

SLAPDASH, showing startling improvement over recent races, broke alertly, moved up fast on outside, came around field in stretch, and just lasted to win. LARRANAGA was kept well up and came fast in stretch. BOLD LOVER ran in close quarters right at end. BRANNON was used up racing LADFIELD into submission, and tired at end. He is sure to improve over this effort. LADFIELD had plenty of early foot. KAWAGOE appears to have lost all form.

FIFTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start bad. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:17. Off at 4:20½. Winner, J. W. Parrish's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOWARD, $5.50, $2.90, $2.50; GARDEN MESSAGE, $2.70, $2.40; SUN MONK, $3.10.

HOWARD, much the best, just galloped along back of the pace to the far turn, where he moved up with a rush on the outside, assumed lead in stretch, and won going away. GARDEN MESSAGE made his bid around turn, but was no match for the winner. SUN MONK displayed keen speed, but weakened in last furlong. FLINT SHOT beat the gate by several lengths, showed speed for a half-mile, then tired. NOAH'S PRIDE ran well for five furlongs. POT AU BROOMS was practically left.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start poor. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 4:44. Off at 4:44. Winner, L. J. Collins' ch. g (3), by Baby Grand—Maries Folly. Trained by A. Miller. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:39.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ELWAWA, $10.20, $7.10, $3.20; RACE CRAFT, $23.20, $7.80; HARDWARE, $3.10.

ELWAWA broke running, rushed into a long lead and, perfectly rated along, easily held race safe. RACE CRAFT moved up gamely around turn and was second in last stride. HARDWARE made his run entering stretch, but tired badly. BEAVER DAM ran a great race after being practically left. HOGANS FOX tired chasing the pace. TOWSON had no chance with the start. He was away poorly

SEVENTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:11. Off at 5:16½. Winner, Mrs. Jr. f. (3), by Chance Shot—Sundina. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:40.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUNCHANCE, $11.60, $4.90, $3.40; TRANSPORT, $3.70, $3.00; GIFTED LADY, $2.70.

SUNCHANCE was much the best. He was eased back off the pace, began to move up around turn, came to the outside of the field in stretch, closed fast, and won going away. TRANSPORT, well up all the way, ran a good race. GIFTED LADY followed pace closely, but weakened suddenly in stretch. MOTLEY is improving. CONCHITA had speed for six furlongs. AIR LINE stopped to a walk.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start bad. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:41. Off at 5:46½. Winner, J. E. Smallman's ch. h. BUSHMAN worked his way up, came to outside and, closing gamely, won going away. COUSIN GEORGE moved up gamely around turn, but weakened in final furlong. TUFFY G. came with a rush on inside. OCTARORO was raced to pieces setting the pace and he stopped badly. DONT BLUSH finished fast. FLAMING LIGHT quit.

Homely Genre Comedy-Drama, Akin to "Anne of Green Gables," Opens Local Run

Marion Marsh Scores in Tale Of Limberlost

Gene Stratton Porter Hit; That Alex Hyde Fellow; Amusement Chatter.

"GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST." Monogram picturization of the novel by Gene Stratton Porter, adapted to the screen by Adele Comandini, featuring Marian Marsh, Ralph Morgan, Helen Jerome Eddy, Louise Dresser, Edward Nugent, Betty Blythe, Barbara Bedford, H. B. Walthall and Tommy Bupp. Directed by Christy Cabanne. Reviewed Tuesday afternoon.

By Nelson B. Bell.

This, of course, will come as no news to readers of both the L. M. Montgomery novel and the Gene Stratton Porter fiction. These assiduous perusers of the figments printed between the covers of books will know that Anne and Elnora Comstock were something more than mere sisters under the skin, like the Colonel's lady and Rosy O'Grady, or whoever it was.

They are blood relatives of an idyllic, pastoral quality of romance that somehow spells success at the American box-office — a common sisterhood of plaintive girlhood, restricted opportunities, belated love and reluctant parental interest that brings them happiness only at that final, crucial hour when all seems more than lost in the manner of a life fulfilled.

Tale of the Backwoods.

It is this sort of homely, slightly pathetic and only occasionally strainedly humorous genre comedy-drama that is revealed on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater for the staggered week beginning yesterday. One might wish for a slightly more sprightly narrative, but certainly not for a more authentic depiction of a characteristically earthy tale of the backwoods.

There are more "names" in the cast of this modest opera of the oppressed than are to be found in the rosters of nine-tenths of the biggest films on the silver sheets—Marion Marsh, Louise Dresser, Ralph Morgan, Helen Jerome Eddy, Barbara Bedford, Robert Ellis, Henry B. Walthall, Edward Nugent, Betty Blythe and Tommy Bupp.

They are not all so well cast as their individual abilities might seem to warrant, but there is still enough for each to do to impress the picture-gazer whose memories and affections extend back beyond day before yesterday.

Marian Marsh was a youthful actress of a few seasons ago about whom Warner Brothers and First National raised considerable fuss and fume. She was featured opposite John Barrymore and otherwise placed in points of greatest vantage. Then, all of a sudden, her vogue evanesced.

Now she returns to a place of eminence in this excellent cast assembled by Monogram Pictures for one of the most popular of the Gene Stratton Porter parables. Perhaps Miss Marsh has lost a little of her original naivete and girlish charm, but she still is a young actress of poise who can read lines intelligently and draw something of a line of demarcation between what are supposed to be the bright and the drab intervals of her vehicle. She matures, perhaps, a little more convincingly than the Anne Shirley of the "Green Gables" fable.

Louise Dresser Scores.

The best work of any member of the cast, however, is registered by that veteran of the vaudeville and musical comedy stages and latterly the cinema, Louise Dresser, who, as Katherine Comstock, the woman obsessed by a devotion that her tragically killed husband never deserved, presents a characterization that must be acknowledged one of the real achievements of later-day acting. From a hard-bitten, remorseless slattern she develops eventually into a woman of some loveliness of character and person. It is one of the best of her numerous worthy chores for the cameras.

The Supplementaries.

Among the others importantly cast, Helen Jerome Eddy, Ralph Morgan, Edward Nugent, Betty Blythe and Tommy Bupp acquit themselves best. This Master Tommy Bupp is quite a juvenile actor. By the merit of his work in this film he takes his place alongside the numerous others of his years who have come to eminence before the lenses.

The supplementary program at RKO-Keith's this week is an elaborate one. The Pathe News bears the double distinction of affording a complete resume of the State's case against Bruno Richard Hauptmann in the Lindbergh kidnaping and murder trial, and an almost equally complete life history of the Dionne quintuplets, who, to these eyes, grew just a trifle monotonous before the pictorial resume of their activities was rounded out by a long and repetitious process.

"Stranger Than Fiction" is another of the camera expositions of things that are exactly that, and the "Parrottville Fire Department," a natural color cartoon comedy that "gets hot" in more ways than one.

Altogether, a bill that embodies a sufficient number of those sure-fire elements of popular appeal quite to justify its unequivocal recommendation to those who are not immune to the simpler avenues of approach to their finer and gentler emotions.

While we are on the topic of RKO-Keith's and its present and imminent bills, it may not be amiss to say that "Night Life of the Gods," having been delayed in release, for one reason or another — both of which might be good—the next attraction on the screen of Manager Hardie Meakin's Fifteenth street opera house will be "Enchanted April." This is a subject in which the stellar role will be played by Ann Harding, supported by an admirable group of associate artists, among whom may be numbered Frank Morgan—brother of the Ralph currently in "Girl of the Limberlost" — Katherine Alexander, Reginald Owen and Ralph Forbes. Unless "Girl of the Limberlost" betrays rare powers of allurement at the ticket wicket, "Enchanted April" will be coming along on Friday. So now you know.

About That Alex Person.

Away back in 1924 a dimunitive blond orchestra leader was having a time trying to get his band into Germany. At that time, American bands were banned, if you get the notion. Alex Hyde, the maestro who is small in stature, but enormous in capability—as you may plainly see by a visit to Loew's Fox this week, where he and his boys are headlining the vaudeville bill—was having the unique experience of being officially barred out of the country of his birth.

Germany knew little of American modern music a decade ago. It had been represented to the German people as a form of "jazz" inseparable in rhythm and jangle from Mr. Berlin's celebrated "Alexander's Ragtime Band." When Mr. Hyde finally gained entrance to his own native country, he quickly established himself as "the Paul Whiteman of the Faderland." The Germans called it "Hyde's Neuheiter." Two bronze busts attest to his celebrity in Berlin and Munich, where he is, in a manner of speaking, an honored museum piece.

Alex Hyde was born in Hamburg, Germany, 29 years ago . . . He was brought to this country when he was 2 . . . His father watched with delight the youngster scraping two sticks together in imitation of his violin and bow . . . When he was 10 he was sent to Michael Svederowski, concert master at the Metropolitian Opera House, and studied under him for four and a half years . . . One day he accompanied his older brother, "Vic," to a rehearsal at Bryant Hall, Forty-second street and Sixth avenue, and here heard with wonder that the first violinist could not play the last two bars of a number correctly . . . Alex took the violin and played them perfectly . . . "Vic" took him out then and bought him his first pair of long pants, and Alex stopped studying . . . He crammed a year's stage experience into three months at a try-out house in Hampstead, Long Island, and the next year was made musical director at Marcus Loew's American Theater (a boy of 15) . . . Later conductor for the Shuberts for such stars as Marie Dressler, Nora Bayes and Hattie King . . . Taking his brother's advice he started a jazz band and went for three months to the Piccadilly in London . . . Then the afore-mentioned trip to Germany . . . From '22 'til '24 conducted Paul Whiteman's "Romance of Rhythm" orchestra, and set a box office record at the Strand Theater . . . One time vaudeville house at Ninth and D streets, here . . . Back to Germany then to play the finest theaters and resorts there . . . Made record run at Pavillion Gruss, favorite spot of European nobility . . . Commuted from Germany here, and back again . . . Stayed long enough to open "Club Richman" . . . In 1930 organized the first girls' band as "Alex Hyde's Musical Darlings" . . . Then into partnership with Irving Mills, and after six months the perfect girl orchestra. He calls this his Musical Temple, and the queen is Ina Ray Hutton . . . His violin was his father's and is approximately 300 years old . . . The bow is a genuine J. P. Vuillaume, and costs more than a fine violin . . . Married his wife when she was attending high school in Minneapolis, and he was playing the Minnesota theater there . . . On a trip to Mexico City with Irving Mills, he found what he considers one of the dancing sensations of the stage, Rita Rio, a dark-haired Mexican beauty with a red-hot version of "La Cucaracha."

So here is the added "dope" about Mr. Hyde that was promised you here yesterday. Or had you forgotten?

Word to the Wise Note.

And if you haven't been listening to The Washington Post's "Parade of Youth" broadcasts you have been cheating yourself—or selves, as the case may be. Donald Novis was on, for example, with them yesterday afternoon at 5:45.

So you see they are much better than goes on WJSV at 10:45 a. m. today!

Ahem! (Or your word may be even better!)

Kiwanis Marks Anniversary.

Westminster, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—The Westminster Kiwanis Club observed the twentieth anniversary of its organization at a meeting last night.

Wears Cossack Hat, Aims Straight

This, ladies and gentlemen, would be Glenda Farrell. It is obvious that she is wearing a so-called Cossack bit of headgear. What is not so obvious is that Miss Farrell is a crack shot with a rifle, having recently won a target contest staged on the Warner lot on the West Coast. This all has nothing to do, of course, with the fact that she is coming along to the Earle screen on Friday in "The Secret Bride," in which Barbara Stanwyck plays the stellar and title roll.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

Reprinted From Yesterdays Last Edition.

Piano recital by Ruth Slenczynski in Constitution Hall. Program: Sonata in C sharp minor (Beethoven), Sonata in M major (Mozart), Nocturne in B flat minor, Grande Valse Brillante in E flat major, Mazurkas in F sharp minor and B minor, Etudes in A minor, C minor and C major (Chopin).

A musical talent of this remarkable quality occurs so seldom that we rightly reserve for its possessor the term prodigy. Fortunate circumstances of heredity and environment, quickened by that energizing spark which may or may not become manifest as genius, have brought forth in Ruth Slenczynski at the age of ten a pianistic ability far in advance of her years. The technical aptitude that resides in her small, plump hands is but one of her valid claims for serious consideration as a precocious musician; she has as well a lyric tone of more than potential beauty, and a temperamental elan extraordinary in a child.

So short of stature that she can just reach the pedals of a concert grand by sitting on the very edge of the bench, she played her taxing program in a posture that left her elbows below the level of the keyboard. When striking fortissimo chords, she was obliged to raise her body in order to obtain the necessary forearm leverage, and during several of the more strenuous compositions, her father sat in a chair behind her to lay a steadying hand on the bench.

Foremost in her equipment is her amazing finger dexterity that makes light of prestissimo passages and produces an even and clear succession of tones. The limitations of her technique apparently are those imposed only by her physical immaturity; she goes as far as her present muscular strength will permit. None save adult experts surpass her in speed and in the surety with which she threads intricate phrases.

She has an inherent sense of rhythm, and follows it in a way that sometimes departs from the traditional procedure. Although she is not always able to produce the full effects she has in mind, her interpretations are essentially intuitive in their insight. Some of her readings were startling in their emotional urgency.

The surge of the "Revolutionary" etude and the tempestuous velocity of the "Winter Wind" etude were astounding in so young a player. The revelations of temperament here disclosed were prophetic, one hopes, of the great interpreter which Ruth may become. More restraint was evident in the Beethoven sonata, of which the first two movements were well proportioned in tone and tempi, although she let herself go with surprising dash in the finale.

Enthusiastically applauded by her auditors, Ruth added two extra numbers at the end of the recital: a concert etude by her father, and the Liszt variations on the theme of the Paganini caprice later used by Brahms and later still by Rakhmaninov for pianistic elaboration. These difficult and seldom-played variations did not seem formidable to the child, who boldly set them forth in virtuoso style. This was perhaps the most exciting moment in a recital full of wonders.

Without any doubt, Ruth is endowed with a talent rich in potentialities of artistry. How her powers will unfold no one can foretell, but the individuality that gleams here and there in her playing promises a full development.

Watching Them Make Pictures

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

A FASHION parade is being filmed for "Roberta," the next Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers flicker. About eight beautiful girls wearing expensive gowns and coats are to walk down a long flight of stairs as the camera follows them.

There is a large portable dressing room behind the set and the girls are quartered here, awaiting word from an assistant director to go out and face the camera. Each girl is photographed individually on the stairs.

The portable dressing room seems like a dugout and the girls seem like players, waiting for the coaches' word to get into the game. One girl can't sit down in her dress, she is tired from standing, awaiting her turn to go on. Another girl is lying lengthwise on a couch; she can't stand for the dress is too heavy and bears her down.

Another girl can't smoke a cigarette or go near an electric bulb. It is amusing to see the odd positions of the different girls in the portable hut. Yet they will display the latest fashions. You will see them on the screen and envy their attire. But you could take very few of them out dancing, for only several are wearing gowns which are practical.

The gals tell me that the most fashionable gowns are like that: They are to be seen and admired only.

* * * *

FOR your score card, so you will know the beauty parade when it passes you on the screen, here is the official line-up of the gals. The tall blonde who resembles Carole Lombard is Lucile Ball, Mack Gray's—the killer—girl friend. The stately red head in the silver gown—she's the one who couldn't sit down—is Virginia Reed. The beautiful tall brunette is Kay Sutton, and you'll see a good close-up of her for she's the cameraman's girl friend. Jane Hamilton is the cute, medium-sized blonde, and the cute medium-sized brunette is Wanda Perry, the only one of the girls brought to Hollywood by Earl Carroll still in pictures. The blonde statuesque show girl, the only one wearing a revealing gown, is Betty Dumbries, who used to show off in Ziegfeld shows. These are the headliners of the beauty parade. See, I went and got acquainted so you'd know them.

Fred Astaire wasn't working this day. He was home with a cold. However, I did learn that Astaire never plays a dramatic scene for the camera on the same day that he dances, for his face gets tired. He doesn't want a tired face photographed. With most dancers it's the feet that get tired.

Mack Gray, both Lucille Ball's and George Raft's bodyguard, has wanted to be an actor. It was finally arranged and Mack was given a role in the melodrama, "Car 99." There is no actor in Hollywood who pays more attention to his make-up and to his role than Gray. His part calls for him to drive a car and his speaking role consists of one line: "Take her to the dressing room."

Mack can't drive a car so they have to use a double for him in most of the scenes. He hasn't read his one line yet but he hopes it is suitable and they don't have to use a double to dub in the line. He stays home every night memorizing his line. He wants to make good as an actor.

* * * *

DIRECTOR VAN DYKE'S new honey is Jeanette MacDonald. Van Dyke is directing "Naughty Marietta" and the leading lady is Miss MacDonald, which makes her the latest to be called Honey.

Van Dyke, Honey and several hundred extras are gathered on and about a large wooden boat on the back lot at Metro waiting for the sun to shine. The boat is to leave Havre for New Orleans with Jeanette MacDonald, but the boat can't sail until the sun shines. Other boats may need water to go sailing, but this one needs sunshine.

Just two minutes of sunshine. Every one waits for hours for that two minutes of sunshine in sunny Hollywood, which this day is cold and cloudy. Suddenly, like a hired actor, the sun appears in make-up. "Hurry, Honey," shouts Van Dyke. "Give it to me right after the principal player disappears." Miss MacDonald on the deck of the boat waves good-by to the crowd on the Havre shore as the boat sails—by pulleys. Five minutes after the scene is taken there is a cloudburst.

Mae West in "Now, I'm a Lady," has just played a scene in which she serves tea for several Southampton society ladies and messes things up by her slang talk and spilling the tea. This part of the script is completed when an executive comes on the set and introduces Mae West to Lord and Lady Byng, visiting nobility. Mae serves tea on the set. She doesn't spill it and acts like a lady.

The assistant director, however, believes he is being kidded when informed that the guests are nobility, Lord and Lady Byng. He says aloud: "Byng, Byng, her come the British."

Chace Dancers Win Applause In Recital Here

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

Marian Chase and her Dance Group, assisted by Michael Logan, of New York, as guest artist, presented an exquisitely staged dance recital at Roosevelt High School auditorium last evening under the auspices of the Community Center Department.

Opening the three-part program was a series of ingenuously executed routines by the junior students, followed by two groups in which Miss Chace and Mr. Logan played important solo parts with and without the advanced student ensemble.

Mr. Logan's "Getting Religion," an interpretation done to Negro spirituals, and "La Valse," done to the music of Maurice Raval, by the entire company, were particularly outstanding on a program equal to any the group has presented.

Accompaniments were played by Lyman McCrary, with Victor Halstead Neal, well-known young Washington organist and pianist, substituting for Miss Chace's interpretation of Cyril Scott's "Lento." Violinist Grace Powell furnished an obbligato for two of the numbers.

Among those appearing in the group were:

Yvonne Allen, Hillis Morris, Marian Lester Shafer, Virginia Elmendorf, Eleanor King, Vilda Renee Goyette, Joanne Leasure, Avis Belt, Alice Nicolson, Stratton Nicolson, Jane Phelps, Sterling Stamford, Robert Black, Helen Hoyem, Katya Mirkin, Ruth Raine, Amalie Preische, Toni Eyle, Elizabeth Peeples, Jesse Mello, Sherman Conrad, Ellem Curran, Neona Reinert, Ann Gromley and Florence Mussey.

Burtner Enters Contest For County Treasurer

Boyce, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—William D. Burtner, assistant cashier of the Boyce State Bank, today announced his candidacy for the treasurership of Clarke County, subject to the Democratic primary in August. Mr. Burtner's candidacy makes the fourth person seeking the Democratic nomination, which is tantamount to election.

Other announced candidates are John O. Haresty, Benjamin Crampton and J. F. Spates, all of Berryville. The treasurership has been held for the past 40 years by W. A. Bradford, Democrat, who announces that he is not a candidate for re-election.

Sinclair Scorns G. O. P. Tax Plans For California

Los Angeles, Jan. 23 (AP).—Upton Sinclair, defeated Democratic nominee for Governor of California, characterized as a "huge joke on the people," the tax program submitted to the Legislature today by Gov. Frank F. Merriam to rehabilitate the State's crippled finances.

The friter and former Socialist, who campaigned on an "End Poverty in California" program, assailed the Republican Governor's proposal to increase by 1 per cent the present 2½ per cent retail sales tax.

Sinclair urged "our EPIC friends" to fight the increase and demand repeal of the tax on everything but luxuries.

In his message to the Legislature at Sacramento, Gov. Merriam said $95,600,000 in new revenue was needed to balance the budget and $47,300,000 for unemployment relief.

The Governor said he would defer specific recommendations on social legislation until the Federal Government has completed its program for unemployment insurance and old-age pensions.

He advocated a plan looking toward acquisition by the State of all privately owned water and power utilities.

Rail Group Creates Board of Research

Creation of the research advisory board of the Association of American railroads was announced yesterday by J. J. Pelley, president of the association.

The board will assist in the research activities of the railroads and aid in the organization of the new department of planning and research which the association is forming.

Those named to the board were Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of Brookings Institution, and Dr. A. A. Potter, dean of the engineering schools at Purdue University.

Amelia Earhart 'Does Pretty Well' In Driving Test

Los Angeles, Jan. 23 (AP).—Amelia Earhart, who flew both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, was obliged today to submit to a routine test to determine if she were competent to drive an automobile in California. It was decided that she was.

Under the eyes of an inspector who did not recognize her, Miss Sarhart drove her machine around the block, gave traffic signals and showed she could stop and start it.

Motorman Exonerated In Death of D. C. Man

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated Guy V. Elmore, 24, street car motorman, in the death of Franklin C. Jackson, 68, of the 1400 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest, who died Sunday from injuries received January 9 when he was struck by a street car at Thomas Circle.

Jackson, it was testified, apparently failed to see the street car and stepped from the curb directly into its path. He suffered head and internal injuries.

Crab, Oyster Workers May Organize Union

Crisfield, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—A union of crab pickers, oyster shuckers and others interested in the part labor plays in the seafood industry may be formed here.

During the week representatives of the American Federation of Labor came to Crisfield and held meeting on Fourth street, with a large number of people present. The purpose of the meeting, it was said, was to get membership for that organization.

This class of labor has had no "union" or organization.

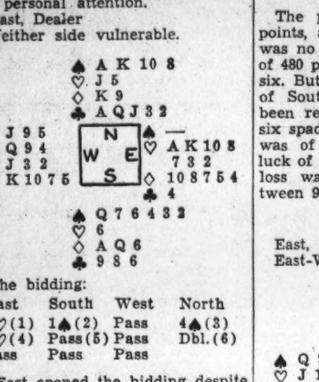
The Cry of "Wolf."

The so-called "mere defensive overcall" is a cry of "Wolf!" If called too often, don't be surprised to find an incredulous partner. Players love to overcall. Some merely to hear their voice, apparently. Every overcall should be as purposeful as a bid; it should be the beginning of a campaign or a piece of safe strategy. It may be used as lead directing or game obstructing but the information it conveys to partner should be definite, not a false cry to attract a little personal attention.

East, Dealer
Neither side vulnerable.



East	South	West	North
1♡(1)	1♠(2)	Pass	4♠(3)
5♡(4)	Pass(5)	Pass	Dbl.(6)
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—East opened the bidding despite his honor trick deficiency because he wanted as cheap an opportunity as possible to show both suits.

2—The chance to show the spades at the one-level can scarcely be passed at cumulative scoring.

3—North suspected a psychic. If he assisted the spades at all, a bid of less than four would be arrant cowardice.

4—The hand clearly invited a save. As the jump spade bid appeared to imply a singleton or void in hearts, East decided to stick to the hearts. An added compulsion to suppressing the diamond suit was that East did not want to be left in five diamonds unless West's diamond holding happened to be abnormally longer and stronger than his heart support.

5—South properly did not take action.

6—North was on the grid! His troubles arose from doubt as to the soundness of the one spade bid by South. It was quite possible that this bid was wholly psychic, as West might hold spade length that he has had no good opportunity to show. Had North been able to count on the spade bid as both a genuine spade suit and reasonable overcalling strength, he would have bid five spades without hesitation.

The Play.

The penalty of two tricks, 250 points, against five hearts doubled, was no great loss against the gain of 480 points at five spades, making six. But if North had been certain of South's bid, slam might have been reached. At the other table six spades was actually bid, and it was of course made through the luck of the club finesse. The actual loss was thus the difference between 980 and 250.

Tomorrow's Hand.

Sterrett's subdivision of lots in square 1958, "Richmond Park," as per plat recorded in Liber No. 84, folio 53, of the records of the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, described as follows: Beginning on the south line of Rodman street, at the northwest corner of said lot, and running thence south along the west line of said lot 102.50 feet to an angle in said line; thence west 6 feet; thence south 30 feet to the north line of a public alley; thence east along said line of said alley, 43 feet to the southeast corner of said lot, thence north along the east line of said lot, 132.50 feet to the south line of Rodman street, and thence west along said line of said street, 37 feet to the place of beginning. Subject to covenants of record.

TERMS: Sold subject to a prior deed of trust for $9,550.00, further particulars of which will be announced at time of sale: the purchase price above said trust to be paid one-third in cash, balance secured by second deed of trust on property sold payable $50.00 per month including interest at six per cent, or all cash. A deposit of $500.00 required. Conveyancing, recording, etc., at purchaser's cost. Terms to be complied with within thirty days, otherwise deposit forfeited and the property may be advertised and resold at the discretion of the trustees.

Wheat Declines As Corn Yields Under Selling

Cotton Prices Advance 2 to 5 Points; May Closes at 12.54.

Chicago, Jan. 23 (AP).—Stop-loss selling developed in the corn market late today and led to price setbacks not only for corn but wheat and oats as well.

Selling of corn apparently resulted from disappointment of future delivery holders that feeder demand failed to increase despite severe cold weather over the corn belt. Relative firmness of wheat at the last was because of buying on belief that the new domestic winter wheat crop had deteriorated owing to frigid temperatures.

Corn closed weak at the day's bottom level, ½ to 1⅝ cents lower, compared with yesterday's finish; May, 84½@84⅝; wheat, ⅜ off to ⅝ up; May, 96⅞@97; oats, ⅛ to ⅝ down, and provisions varying from 17 cents decline to a rise of 2 cents.

Eastern sources were credited with most of the selling, which carried corn and other grains down as the day drew to an end. Corn market weakness was more or less associated with a break of 15 to 25 cents in hog prices. Revival of talk about probable imports of corn from Argentina counted also as a bearish factor.

Cotton Market

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Slight early declines were followed by moderate rallies in cotton today on trade buying and covering promoted by smaller crop figures from India and reports of comparatively smaller offerings. May contracts after selling off to 12.47 at the start, advanced to 12.57 and closed at 12.54, with the general market steady at net advances of 2 to 5 points.

A report from Washington said Senator Bankhead had introduced a bill repealing that section of the act under which the cotton pool is held, which requires disposition of the cotton by March, 1936. According to this report the bill, if passed, would permit the Secretary of Agriculture to hold all Government cotton held by him indefinitely.

These advices came in for considerable comment during the afternoon, but late buying was attributed largely to reports that one of the large international houses had reduced its estimate of the Indian crop to 4,857,000 bales, compared with 6,008,000 last year, owing to recent unfavorable weather. Exports today, 2,888, making 2,865,259 so far this season. Port receipts, 3,964. United States port stocks, 2,922,212.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was easy today. It reacted about 1 to 9 points, but at the end of the day some fairly good buying of May and July through houses with cotton and Wall Street connections rallied the market and final prices were unchanged to 9 points higher. Total sales were 62 contracts. Crude oil was firm at 9¾ cents in the Southeast, valley and Texas. Bleachable spot, nominal; January closed, 10.95; March, 11.05; May, 11.12; July, 11.15.

Power Production Rises In Past Week

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Electric power output last week totaled 1,778,273,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 1,722,609,000 kilowatt hours the previous week the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The increase over a year ago was 9.4 per cent, against an increase the previous week of 7.7 per cent.

Regional gains from 1933 for last week were:

New England, 6.4 per cent against 7.7 per cent the week before; Middle Atlantic, 7.1 against 5.4; Central Industrial, 11.9 against 8.7; West Central, 6.8 against 4.1; Southern States, 11.0 against 9.4; Rocky Mountain, 11.7 against 12.0; Pacific Coast, 5.8 against 6.0.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Trading on the stock exchange was fairly active today. Oil shares were the features, gaining strength on American advices, while industrials, especially rubber issues, were firmer. Gold mining and kindred securities eased on profit taking, but hardened later in the session. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Political and economic uncertainty affected French issues adversely on the Bourse today but international issues advanced. Gold mining stocks gained heavily under a demand from London and other shares also improved. Quotations closed generally heavy except for international issues.

Berlin—Prices on the bourse were a trifle better today, but the closing was inactive owing to the lack of orders.

Passage of Chilean Bill Regulating External Debt Service Stirs Hope Nation Is Preparing to Make Substantial and Definite Settlements.

New York, Jan. 23.—Passage by the Chilean Chamber of Deputies of a bill regulating the country's external debt service has received considerable attention in interested financial circles here. Some have jumped to the conclusion that Chile is preparing to make a substantial and definite settlement with holders of the $300,000,000 of bonds outstanding in this country, so that considerable buying of these bonds resulted, causing advances in their quotations. However, this is not precisely the case.

On October 21 last, the president of Chile sent a message to the congress in Santiago outlining a proposal for the partial resumption of external debt service. The bill, embodying the President's proposals, provides that funds for the external debt service shall be derived from two sources: the share of the government in the profits of the Nitrate Sales Corporation, and certain revenues derived from the government from taxes and surtaxes imposed on copper mining companies in Chile. These revenues are to be applied not merely to service the direct external debt of the government, but also foreign debts of municipalities, railroads and mortgage banks which are guaranteed by the government.

The amount to be received by the bondholders, therefore, will depend primarily upon the size of these revenues which the government has set aside for external debt service. The entire amount of these revenues will not be used to pay interest on the external obligations now in default. Only 50 per cent will be applied to interest payments. The remaining 50 per cent, after deduction of expenses for administration of the plan, will be applied to the purchase of such bonds in the open market.

Impossible Yet to Estimate Revenues That Will Be Available.

It is not yet possible to estimate with any degree of accuracy the amount of the revenues that will thus become available for debt service. The income of the Nitrate Sales Corporation depends primarily upon the volume and prices of Chilean nitrate exports. Last year, Chile dissolved the Cosach Corporation, a combination of nitrate companies formed in 1931 under the auspices of the government, into its constituent concerns. The Nitrate Sales Corporation was organized and given the exclusive right to sell Chilean nitrate and iodine abroad. The producing companies now sell to the Sales Corporation their entire output of these products. The Sales Corporation turns over 25 per cent of the profits it derives from these sales to the government, and this is the revenue which is now to be applied to the service of the external debt.

Similarly, the size of the revenues to be derived by the Chilean government from taxes imposed on copper mining companies will depend upon the price of and the size of the export demand for the red metal which Chile produces. The forthcoming international copper conference will help clarify prospects for Chilean copper exports.

Conservative but unofficial estimates from informed quarters place the likely sum to be realized from these two sources at from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 per annum. Since 50 per cent of this total will be used for the purchase of bonds in the open market, the maximum available for the payment of interest will be only about $2,000,000. The aggregate external debt of Chile now amounts to approximately $437,000,000, so that interest payments offered to bondholders under this plan will be at the rate of less than one-half of 1 per cent per annum. Thus, on a 6 per cent bond of $1,000 principal amount, a bondholder would receive about $5 a year, instead of the stipulated amount of $60.

Relatively Favorable Reception Accorded Enabling Legislation.

The relatively favorable reception accorded news of the enactment of enabling legislation for this plan, reflected in advance in prices of Chilean dollar bonds, does not reflect only the prospect of these small interest payments. It results also from anticipation that the application of some $2,000,000 a year to the purchase of these bonds will strengthen the future market for Chilean securities.

The Chilean plan for resumption of external debt service has caused disappointment to those here who are charged with the obligation of protecting interests of American foreign bondholders. They point out that the offer is not based even on the present capacity of the country to pay its foreign debts, and certainly will represent far less than that capacity in the future, whenever business conditions improve materially. The law is primarily an effort to liquidate the country's external debt as rapidly as possible and at small cost. If Chile is to regain the high credit standing in the foreign capital markets which she enjoyed for many decades in the past, bankers here say she will have to show a greater willingness to make commensurate sacrifices to discharge her obligations to foreign bondholders more fully.

Bond Market Gains Fraction In Larger Sales

Federals Capture Peaks; Grading Volume Up $14,528,000.

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Strength in United States Government bonds overshadowed all other activities on the listed market again today with 18 issues attaining new 1934-35 highs. Corporate loans were generally narrow.

Other than the statement of Secretary Morgenthau before the House Appropriations Committee that he was optimistic over future Federal financing, there was nothing in the day's news to account for the broad advance in Government bonds, although continued institutional buying was believed to account for a considerable portion of the turnover of $4,990,000.

Federals Advance.

Treasury 3¾s of 1946 advanced 14-32ds to 108.27, the 3⅛s of 1949 gained 11-32ds at 103.20, and the 4¼s of 1945 were 10-32ds higher at 104.11.

Other issues were bid up 6-32ds to 11-32s to new highs for a year or longer, while Home Owners Loan and Federal Farm mortgage issues were purchased in large volume at correspondingly advanced levels.

In the corporate section there was a tendency toward relaxation in activity, although moderate advances in a number of standard railroad and utility bonds established new highs.

Santa Fe Up.

Among these were Santa Fe 4½s, up ¾ at 110¼; Bell Telephone 5s, up ¼ at 115¼; Pennsylvania Power & Light 4½s, up ⅛ at 100⅜, and Louisville & Nashville 4½s, up ⅝ at 102⅜.

The Associated Press average of 20 rails advanced .15 of a point to 87.03, that for 10 utilities was .39 of a point higher at 86.95, and 10 low-yield issues held virtually unchanged.

There was little activity in the foreign section where the trend was slightly lower for German, Polish and South American bonds.

Transfers aggregated $14,528,000, the largest in the past 10 days, compared with $13,429,000 on Tuesday.

Steel Operation Rate Rises To 51.5 Per Cent

Production Reflects Auto Activity; Further Gains Seen.

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Steel production, as estimated by the Iron Age, crossed the 50 per cent mark this week and is now at the highest level since early last June. The publication fixed the national average at 51.5 per cent of capacity, against 49 per cent last week. Last year the present rate was not attained until April.

The rise in activity, declared the summary, reflects automobile production rapidly approaching 1930 levels and multiplying demands from miscellaneous consuming sources.

"Further gains in operations," said the review, "are apparently assured, though a setback in scrap has introduced a note of caution. Following the declines at Chicago last week scrap prices in most market centers have lost much of their buoyancy.

"The current hesitancy of old material prices, though possibly attributable in part to uncertainty as to the outcome of the gold clause case, is generally regarded as a temporary reaction from the excessive bullishness on the part of the scrap trade.

"Certainly there are no evidences of a relaxation in the demand for steel from the automotive industry. Mill deliveries on cold-finished sheets, used for motor car bodies, have been extended to five or six weeks.

"Steel output is up 4 points to 36 per cent at Pittsburgh; 2 points to 59 per cent at Chicago; 6 points to 35 per cent in the Philadelphia district; 3 points to 63 per cent in the Valleys, and 5 points to 95 per cent in the Wheeling area."

Surplus Freight Cars.

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Class 1 railroads on December 31 had 392,107 surplus freight cars in good repair and immediately available for service, the Association of American Railroads announced today. On December 14 there were 397,663 surplus cars.

A. B. A. Midwinter Conference To Discuss Estates and Trusts

New York, Jan. 23.—Present-day problems in the administration of estates and trusts will be surveyed from four different angles in the forthcoming sixteenth annual midwinter trust conference of the trust division, American Bankers Association, to be held February 12-14, at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York City, Leon M. Little, president of the trust division, said today in announcing the program for the meeting.

Representatives of business, insurance, and the Government, as well as of banking institutions, will discuss various aspects of trust business in the light of current conditions, he said. The program for the three-day meeting follows:

Pennsylvania Road Declares 50-Cent Return

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. Votes $1 Dividend On Common And B.

Philadelphia, Jan. 23 (AP).—The Pennsylvania Railroad today declared a dividend of 1 per cent or 50 cents a share, payable March 15 to stockholders of record February 15.

The company last year declared two dividends of 1 per cent each, one in the spring and the other in the fall.

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Directors of Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. today declared an extra dividend of $1 a share on the common and common "B" stocks, both payable March 1, to stock of record February 15. Similar extras have been paid at this time in previous years.

Net income for the year 1934 amounted to $20,086,690, equal, after charges, etc., to $5.92 a share on the combined common and "B" stocks compared with $16,731,175, or $4.84 in the previous year.

American Superpower Corporation (Del.), reports for the year ended December 31 net income of $346,235 after expenses, taxes and loss on securities, equal to $1.28 a share on the first preferred stock. This compares with $624,330, or $1.99 a share in 1933.

Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. reports net loss in 1934 of $24,682 after all charges, compared with loss of $84,519 in 1933.

Ingersoll-Rand Co. declared a dividend of 50 cents on the common stock, payable March 1 to stock of record February 4. Similar payments were distributed in the two previous quarters.

Directors of the Bristol-Myers Co. declared an extra disbursement of 10 cents and the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the common stock, both payable March 1 to stock of record February 11.

Housing Drive Makes Strides In Six Months

Security and Trust to Enlarge Its Northeast Branch.

By Karl von Lewinski.

Building and modernization of homes in the United States has shown phenomenal progress in the past six months, according to reports from the Federal Housing Administration.

Pointing to carloadings of building materials as the best indication of a marked upturn, housing officials cite an increase of 160 per cent in carloadings of building supplies by the Erie Railroad during the last month of 1934, as compared to the last month of 1933.

The vice president-treasurer Heating and Finance Corporation of New York City report a 318 per cent increase in business during 1934.

A study of reemployment in Maryland cities shows that in Baltimore there are no plumbers, electricians nor stonemasons on relief roles, and the number of carpenters on relief rolls has been almost cut in half.

Employment Gains.

The assistant State administrator of unemployment relief reports that in Kent, Caroline, Somerset and Harford Counties not a single mechanic is on the relief rolls. In San Diego, Calif., 437 men in the building trades have been removed from relief rolls and put on pay rolls. Sacramento, Calif., estimated 1,000 to 1,500 craftsmen put to work as result of revived building activity.

In the State of Georgia, building permits in 1934 increased 300 per cent over 1933, with alterations and repairs heading the list of permits. The latest reports from various community chairmen throughout the country indicate that the winter season has not checked the forward movement of the better housing campaign.

Galesburg, Ill., reports $571,501 modernization work pledged; Mamaroneck, N. Y., reports $435,000; Scarsdale, N. Y., $174,648; Elizabeth, N. J., $205,235; Perth Amboy, N. J., $662,500; New Castle, Pa., $365,500; Charleston, W. Va., $1,279,400.

American Security Expands.

The American Security & Trust Co. announced yesterday that it would shortly begin remodeling and enlarging its Northeast branch, located at Eighth and H streets northeast.

The step was made necessary, bank officials explained, to provide facilities for the rapid financial growth of that section in recent years.

The trust company owns the property adjoining the Northeast Branch on H street, and when the addition is completed the present banking space will be more than doubled.

Appleton P. Clarke, jr., the architect, will begin remodeling in the near future.

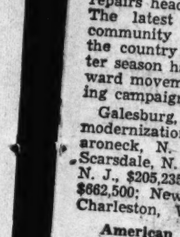
The Northeast Branch of the company was established by the Home Savings Bank in 1906 and has been in business in that section for 29 years. The Home Savings Bank merged with the American Security & Trust Co., in 1918.

Harry P. White, assistant treasurer of the company, is manager of the Northeast Branch. Mr. White is one of the past presidents of the Northeast Business Men's Association, is now its treasurer, and is active in various organizations in different sections of the city.

Pierce & Co. Expand.

No change in the Washington office of E. A. Pierce & Co. as the result of the firm's merger with John F. Clarke & Co. is anticipated by Thomas M. Brahaney, manager of the Pierce Washington office.

John F. Clark & Co. had no Washington office. Under the terms of the merger, the only changes will be in cities where both firms have offices. In those cases the business will be combined and the offices closed in the interest of economy, Mr. Brahaney said.



BRAHANEY.

The merged concern will do business under the name of E. A. Pierce & Co., and carries with it the consolidation of 26 offices into the company's nation-wide chain. The three present senior partners in the firm of John F. Clark & Co. will become general partners in the new organization. They are Russell Clark, A. H. Shatford and James Coker.

Mitchell Returns to Wall Street.

Twenty-five years ago, Mitchell started in the same way. From a modest office the road of fortune led him to the presidency of the largest bank in the country, the National City Bank of New York. In the financial debacle of 1929 Mitchell was shorn of his power and fell heavily into debt.

According to the report, Mr. Mitchell plans to specialize in the reorganization of corporations. During his business career he has been active in such corporations as the Western Electric Co., of which he was assistant manager, and the Trust Company of America, where he served as assistant to the president.

District of Columbia Bankers Association will meet on Monday, January 28, in the board room of the American Security and Trust Co.

Stock Trading.

Trading on the Washington Stock Exchange yesterday was the slowest recorded this year. American Security and Trust Co. furnished the only sales of the day with three turnovers at 200.

Curb's Prices Close Mixed In Dull Sales

Specialties Score Gains; Trading Mounts to 126,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Most curb stocks finished with narrow price changes today. Dealings continued dull, with the list showing no important feature. A few specialties advanced.

Newmont Mining lost a point, but other metals were steady. Montgomery-Ward A got up 2 points on a light exchange, while A. O. Smith gained half as much.

Quotations were about unchanged to a trifle higher in American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Gulf Oil, Lake Shore, Wright Hargreaves, Swift & Co., Swift International and Creole Petroleum. Small fractional recessions appeared in International Petroleum and Parker Rust Proof.

Standard Oil May Buy Properties In Kentucky

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Dow Jones & Co. says it is understood the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey is considering acquisition of the properties of Standard Oil Co. of Kentucky through offer of an exchange of stock.

Latest published balance sheet of the Kentucky company showed its total assets at $56,633,196. Its sole capitalization was $26,069,834 of $10 par value common shares.

Book of Queens.

There is a stately "Book of Queens," all bound in gorgeous reds and greens, and handsome it appears; this noble volume to me brings the lives of all the female kings for quite a thousand years. And there are pictures showing queens in rich attire, in festive scenes, with crowns and thrones on deck, and one would think those royal girls, bestowing smiles on belted earls, should happy be as Heck. But as I read the queenly "Lives," I think that they, as farmers' wives, would have a better time; for most of them were born to know the very depths of grief and woe, of plot, intrigue and crime. The Stuart queens were out of luck, they seldom had a bone or buck that they could call their own; the sad-eyed queen of Charles the First was starved for lack of liverwurst, though heiress to a throne. The Tudor queens stand out as girls who had an amplitude of pearls, mail-order diamonds, too; but dire affliction dogged their heels, and took the flavor from their meals, and they were always blue. Poor Mary wed a Spanish prince who looked upon her as a quince, his treatment made her ache; the only fun that came her way was when she gathered in some jay and burned him at the stake. Elizabeth won great renown as being worthy of her crown, but life was full of strain; her teeth were aching day and night, and not a dentist was in sight to bring relief from pain. And so they suffered, one and all, from troubles great and troubles small, their thrones were out of plumb; and they were glad when death appeared and muttered sadly through his beard that now their time had come.

YOUR MEETIN' JEAN, AN' HER LIVIN' IN MY OLD HOME, AN' WANTIN' YOU TO COME PLAY WITH HER — SEEMS ALMOST TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE, DENNIE!
OH LOOK, GRAN'MA, HERE COMES JEAN, NOW!
MAY DENNIE COME OVER TO MY HOUSE RIGHT AWAY?
WHY OF COURSE, JEAN.
I'M ALL READY T'GO.
WHEN WE REACH THE HOUSE SOMEBODY'LL HAVE TO CARRY DENNIE IN, AND I'LL DO IT. AT LEAST I'LL GET TO SEE THE KITCHEN.
HERE I GO, WALKING UP TO THE BACK DOOR, WHEN I USED TO DRIVE UP TO THE FRONT, BUT SOMETHING TELLS ME THINGS ARE GONNA CHANGE.

By Katherine Smith.

FIVE nations are linked by air waves on the CBS "Cause and Cure of War," broadcast, 4:30 to 5 today. It is a feminist's program; five ladies will cram their talks into that half hour.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, founder of the national committee, makes the initial address from Washington. She will be followed by Katherine Courtney, British chairman, for Women's Crusade for Peace; Ruth Bryan Owen, Minister to Denmark, heard from the Legation in Copenhagen. Then the scene shifts to Holland, where Miss Cornelia van Asch van Wyck, president of the World Council of the Y. W. C. A., will be heard from Utrecht; then Mrs. Tsune Gauntlett, president of Women's Pan-Pacific Union, speaks from studios of the Japanese Radio Corporation.

All talks will be in English.

Ruth Etting and Red Nichols make their debut on the College Prom series tonight, WMAL, 7:45. The idea is that the company makes a mythical tour of college campuses, the first stop being the United States Naval Academy. To make the program more effective, Coach Tom Hamilton, of Navy's football team, is scheduled to speak.

Nichols' fans may look forward to the band's Washington appearance. It plans to play for the Maryland dance at the Willard February 1. Do you know his theme song, "Wailing to the Four Winds?" It's something out of the ordinary.

WJSV's series "Traffic Tragedies," are well worth a half hour of your time. Like most well-developed plots, the action does not get tense until after the first 15 minutes, so if you're tempted to switch it off, don't.

If the rest of the series may be judged by Tuesday's offering, they are well worked out dramatizations, based upon cases from police records. The job of making a recorded fact alive and moving is a difficult one, but Ronald Dawson and players have done it well. Further, the players are an above average radio group; the lady who had hysterics at the auto crash had them convincingly; the penitent reckless driver managed to keep sobs out of his voice when he found he'd unwittingly killed the lady he loves.

If you tune in, be prepared for melodrama.

"MEridian 7-1212" on WJSV, 11:30 p. m., dramatizes the motive behind inquiries for correct time. The title is the New York number through which time is given. The play is an unusual and experimental drama, written by Irving Reis, C. B. S. control board engineer.

A suicide, a wager, travel connections, a date of an execution, are some of the events hooked up to the correct time. The play will be presented for the purpose of expanding engineering technique in radio dramatics.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

ELIMINATION of the 5 per cent pay cut, restoration of annual leave and removal of the restrictions on promotion are all three necessary to the restoration of the civil service to conditions as they were before the depression, it was declared last night by Dr. Leonard D. White, civil service commissioner.

BAKER.

Improvements in the public service constituted the theme of Dr. White's statement.

One of the fundamental demands, he said, in these improvements is to bring the patronage employes within the merit system.

Other improvements include a board of review to conciliate or arbitrate differences between employes and their supervisory officers. However, Dr. White said, it would be unfortunate if the existence of such a tribunal should transform administrative questions into legal issues or should act in the direction of making it more difficult for incompetent persons to be eliminated from the public service.

"A healthy service needs both adequate protection against abuse of power and adequate means of getting rid of those employes who prove to be unequal to their tasks," the merit system expert emphasized.

The public service would be much more attractive if there were better methods for arranging transfers from office to office and for filling higher positions by promotion or by transfer instead of by calling for open competitive examination, it was pointed out.

There should be a much more rigid elimination of unfitted employes during their probationary period, Dr. White said, and then revealed a flaw in the present system.

"At the present time it is rare indeed for a probationer to be discharged because he has shown himself unsuited for his work. I wish I could believe that this testifies to the universal success of the examinations given by the Civil Service Commission, but unfortunately, I am not able to do so."

Dr. White concluded his statement with a strong recommendation for greatly extended training courses for young persons in the service to enable them to prepare themselves for higher positions and greater responsibilities. He also paid tribute to the American Federation of Government Employes for its sponsorship of National Civil Service Week last week.

Harris & Ewing.

Personnel Chief Transferred.

Regarded as one of the most able men in Federal Housing Administration, Troy B. Hewitt, of Tampa, Fla., has been transferred from personnel director to a field position, it was revealed by FHA officials last night. Mrs. Bertha Rees, assistant personnel director, who was formerly with Civil Service Commission, is reported to have taken over Mr. Hewett's duties.

Mr. Hewett probably will leave this week for California, where he will survey the better housing program drive there. Later he will go to other States, taking the best features of the campaign in each locality for incorporation into the national program.

The Floridian has borne the brunt of conflict between his Republican superiors in FHA and Democratic members of Congress over patronage. This conflict during the brief life of FHA has often submerged Mr. Hewett, resulting in the FHA being labeled an "administrative madhouse."

From our investigations at FHA it seems that Frank C. Straat, office manager and assistant comptroller, and reputed Republican, is the personnel dictator. What success he will have in running through appointments over violent objections from Capitol Hill in the future remains to be seen as Hewett's successor, Mrs. Rees, is an employe of thorough training in the merit system, due to her career at Civil Service Commission.

JUST back from a fishing trip off the Florida coast, Otto H. Marquer (P), Internal Revenue, has snapshots to prove his stories. He was with a party that caught 35 amberjacks in one day. Mr. Marquer personally landed a 52-pounder, one of the largest amberjacks hooked on the Gulf Coast this season. Depression scars on his purse prevented him from having the prize mounted for his summer cottage at Woodland Beach.

Mrs. Sada Shinn (C), General Accounting Office, has been appointed financial secretary of the West Virginia State Society, Edward H. Nunnally, FHA, president, announces.

Justice Postettes.

George Randall was the guest of honor at a stag party given by a group of fellow employes in Identification Unit recently, marking his approaching marriage to Miss Sadie Graham, of South Carolina.

Mrs. Florence Bush and Miss Ethel Flax are confined to their homes by illness.

Mr. and Mrs. William McKenzie, the former of Identification Unit, are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a daughter who has been christened Mary Ellen. Miss Eleanor Kephart (P), has returned to work after a brief illness.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF (F), (P) or (C) follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor. You will receive tickets to Loew's Fox (stage, Maestro Alex Hyde, California Red Heads and other acts; screen, Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery in "Biography of a Bachelor Girl"); or to Loew's Palace (Eddie Cantor in "Kid Millions"); or to Loew's Columbia (third week of Joan Crawford, Robert Montgomery and Clark Gable in "Forsaking All Others").

Diary office hours are daily, except Sunday, 12 noon to 1 p. m. and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturday, 12 noon up to 2:30 p. m.

M. L. Leonard (P), reviewer of income tax returns, was busy yesterday thanking his fellow workers at Internal Revenue for their thoughtfulness in sending him a bottle of fine old Scotch during his confinement at home following an accident last week. The gift was uniquely wrapped in yellow ribbon, on which were inscribed messages of cheer, poetry and jokes.

MANY devices of commercial and military value are found in the latest list of patents granted to Government employes. Some of the inventors and their products are:

George A. Graham and James W. Goodwin, Agriculture, collaborators on a gas-flow meter that can be held in the hand, taking the place of the large, bulky meters generally in use.

James C. Karnes and Gregory J. Kessenich, Navy, collaborators on an apparatus for teaching student aviators. Images are projected on not one, but three walls of a chamber, so that the student will have visual effects forward as well as to either side of him.

"PARADE of YOUTH"

Rules of Contest:

Take the words "The Parade of Youth," and see how many words of not more than five letters each, you can make from the letters contained in this phrase. Each letter may be used only as often as it appears in the words "The Parade of Youth."

Only words in common usage will be accepted. Abbreviations, foreign words or obsolete words may not be used.

On completing your word list, write a statement of not more than 25 words on "What I Like Best in THE PARADE OF YOUTH." To do this, get next Sunday's Washington Post, and read the new newspaper for boys and girls which comes with it.

Send your list of words and your statement to The Washington Post by Wednesday, January 30, at the latest. The contest is open to any boy and girl who has not yet had his or her 17th birthday.
